Security Act Is Declared Invalid in Boston Suit

Old Age, Unemployment Insurance Provisions Ruled Out.

Rights of States Believed in Peril

U. S. Fearing Revenue Loss, Moves for Review by High Court.

By William V. Nessly.

Startled by a decision of the First Circuit Court of Appeals at Boston yesterday holding the social security act unconstitutional, the Government officials at once prepared to press for a Supreme Court review of the case before the summer recess.

Fear of a wave of injunctions that would halt collection of taxes under the act, thereby depriving the Treasury of much revenue counted on in budget compilations, as well as hamper the work of the Social Security Board, prompted the decision to seek early final action.

The Circuit Court, in a two-to-one decision, ruled out both the old-age benefit and unemployment insurance provisions of the act in a decision that called for maintenance of State's rights, and said of the measure:

"The entire plan, viewed as a whole, is an attempt to do indirectly what Congress cannot do directly, and to assume national control over a subject clearly within the jurisdiction of the States."

The ruling came from the same court that in July, 1935, held against the processing taxes of the agricultural adjustment act and was sustained by the Supreme Court, thereby ending the life of AAA. That also was a two-to-one decision in the Circuit Court.

Hope for Review.

Already before the Supreme Court, with arguments completed, is a case involving the unemployment insurance provisions of the act, appealed from the Circuit Court at New Orleans, which, in a case from Alabama, upheld the act as constitutional. Thus, the two circuit courts are at direct variance in their rulings on the unemployment insurance clauses.

Robert H. Jackson, Assistant Attorney General, presented the Government's case in the circuit court and also argued the Alabama case in the Supreme Court. He is expected to have charge of presentation of the appeal in the Boston ruling.

Arthur J. Altmeyer, chairman of the Social Security Board, last night expressed hope that the latter decision can be reviewed by the Supreme Court at the present term lest the board be "hampered in its work of completing and operating the organization necessary to administer the unprecedented task of providing some degree of old-age security to 27,000,000 working men and women."

He said, "The Board will undoubtedly now have some difficulty in recruiting its staff because the question of constitutionality presents to potential employes of the board doubt as to the security of employment with the board."

See Peril to States.

The Boston action was brought by George P. Davis, of Waltham, Mass., a public utility stockholder, attacking the law. Justices Scott Wilson and James M. Morton, jr., ruled against the law, while Senior Judge George H. Gingham dissented.

The majority opinion contained two "reminders." It asserted that the powers of Congress and constitutional amendments are the proper path for meeting "new conditions." Next it declared that "recent legislation" served to "remind us" that unless safeguarded the States would become "mere 'geographical subdivisions.'"

Discussing the old-age benefit section, the majority held that the taxing power of Congress was broad, but added:

"That it was intended by those adopting the Constitution that it should reach every possible relation between employer and employe as a subject for taxation, we cannot agree."

Later, it added:

"It has never been held, however, either by the Supreme Court of the United States or the Supreme Court of any State so far as we are advised, that Congress had the power to tax the common right to employ labor. It is like taxing a person's right to work."

Suit Against Railroad.

On the unemployment insurance tax, the majority said:

"Nowhere do we find that an excise tax has ever been imposed in this country on the natural right to employ labor in manufacturing, or in any trade or calling for profit."

The minority opinion, on the other hand, held regarding the old-age pension tax:

"I regard the tax as an excise lawfully laid for the collection and payment of general revenue into the Treasury of the United States."

On the unemployment insurance, it said:

"It seems to me * * *that the act of doing business, or of doing business in a particular way or form may be selected by Congress as the proper object for laying an excise tax, and that the act of employing individuals in a business or occu-

Hepburn Wins Point; Rail Tieup Is Halted

Union to Withdraw Organizer for G. M. Parley.

Southern Pacific Men Delay Strike to Permit Mediation.

By the Associated Press.

Oshawa, Ontario, April 16.—The United Automobile Workers Union decided tonight to withdraw Hugh Thompson, C. I. O. organizer, from the General Motors strikers' committee seeking a walkout settlement, and to accept Premier Mitchell Hepburn's invitation to a peace conference.

Homer Martin, international president of the U. A. W., announced that the strike of 3,700 auto workers would continue, however, pending the conclusion of the premier's conference.

The union's decision to withdraw Thompson, called a "foreign agitator" by the premier, removed a serious obstacle to strike negotiations, for Hepburn had refused to receive any committee including the C. I. O. representative.

Earlier, a renewed attack by Premier Mitchell Hepburn on John L. Lewis and his lieutenants had threatened to upset peace negotiations.

A few hours after Martin, said he would ask the strikers to accept an "understanding" reached in Detroit to end the walkout, the Premier, Lewis' No. 1 enemy in Canada, declared the strike would be settled in his office and that neither Martin nor Thompson would be in on the settlement.

He called Martin and Thompson "just a pair of bluffers" and said they ought to get out of Canada and allow the country to "settle its own problems."

It was Hepburn's refusal to permit Thompson to attend a conference with company and worker representatives that broke down previous efforts to end the strike.

Martin had said his "understanding" was reached in Detroit yesterday at a conference between U. A.

A threatened strike of more than 8,000 employes of the Southern Pacific Railroad suddenly was called off in San Francisco last night, only an hour or so before the time set for its start. The action was taken to permit an emergency mediation board, appointed Wednesday by President Roosevelt, an opportunity to seek a settlement.

Members of the National Mediation Board waited in their offices here long after normal closing time in the hope that some such action would be taken before the 9 p. m. deadline. They received with "great gratification" word of the revocation of the strike order. The National Mediation Board is composed of James W. Carmalt, chairman; William M. Leiserson and Otto S. Beyer.

The strike had been called by the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the Brotherhood of Firemen and Enginemen, in a representation dispute in which the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Order of Railway Conductors also were parties. These latter organizations, however, had said they would attempt to keep the trains running.

The national board members had exhausted all peace moves open to them under the railway labor act. Three weeks ago they summoned to Washington for mediation conferences representatives of the road and the unions involved. When mediation failed they proposed arbitration, as the law provides, but this was rejected by disputants.

The next step, under the law, was appointment by the President of an emergency mediation board, on which were named Dr. Dexter Keezer, president of Reed College, Portland, Oreg.; Charles Kerr, Washington lawyer, and G. Stan-

Myers Assails Low-Interest Farm Loans

FCA Head Predicts Land Boom Unless Rate Is Increased.

Proposed Return to 4½ Per Cent in Line With Economy Drive.

By Robert C. Albright.

The Administration yesterday renewed war on inflationary tendencies with a warning by Gov. W. I. Myers, of the Farm Credit Administration, that artificially low farm interest rates might result in a land boom.

Joining the Government's new retrenchment and credit front, Myers went before the House Agriculture Committee in opposition to further extension of the emergency 3½ per cent rate on Federal Land Bank loans.

It appears quite possible that if the Federal Land Banks continue to finance the purchase of farms at an artificially low interest rate, it may have the effect of stimulating a land boom and ultimately may have a far-reaching and undesirable effect on the whole structure of land values in the United States," Gov. Myers said.

"Interest Subsidy" Costly.

Myers was testifying against a bill to continue the emergency rate, expiring July 1, for two more years. He emphasized the cost to the Treasury of a farm "interest subsidy." He said farm conditions have improved to a point where barring disaster such as drought or floods, the great majority of land-bank borrowers can pay a business rate of interest."

His warning against a farm land boom followed recent admonitions in high Administration quarters against other inflationary trends.

On March 15 Chairman Marriner S. Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board said "the upward spiral of wages and prices into inflationary price levels can be as disastrous as the downward spiral of deflation." Eccles favored a reasonable easy money policy, but said it should be accompanied by a balanced budget and additional income and profits taxes if necessary.

Two weeks ago President Roosevelt struck at mounting prices and production of durable goods, such as steel and copper, at a White House press conference, and emphasized his belief they were too high.

Governor Myers yesterday confined himself to the farm situation. He pointed out that the farm price index, which stood at 126 in 1930 and dipped to 55 in 1933, was again back at 126 last December. Tracing improvement in farmers' debt-paying ability, he cited the decrease in delinquent loans. He said 85.1 per cent of all loans were in good standing at the end of last year.

Policy Questioned.

Out of 6,812,000 farmers in the United States, Myers said only 639,826, or less than 10 per cent, were land bank borrowers. Only 14.9 per cent of farm borrowers, or less than 1.5 per cent of all farmers, were delinquent, he added.

"The question may well be raised," the FCA governor said, "as to whether it is sound policy to continue a heavily subsidized interest rate which, over a period of time, may have a far-reaching and undesirable effect on land values, in an attempt to assist this group."

In warning against possibility of a boom, Myers said farm real estate values have begun to strengthen with the price advance in farm products. He said this strengthening has been accompanied by increased activity in the market for farm real estate.

As Gov. Myers testified against extension of the 3½ per cent rate on

Bill to Promote Moore and Welles Goes to Senate

With approval by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee yesterday of a bill which would establish the office of counselor to the State Department, solution of an Administration embarrassment of months appeared near.

Enactment of the bill will be followed, it was believed by observers, by the appointment of Assistant Secretary R. Walton Moore to the new post and of Assistant Secretary Sumner Welles as undersecretary.

Both are known to have desired the undersecretaryship. Hence, legislation permitting promotion of both assistant secretaries would offer a painless way out of the difficulties.

It is assumed the bill will be pushed with Administration support to early passage.

G-Man Felled by Four Bullets in Topeka Postoffice.

Physician Forced To Treat Wounds

Confession Announced; Pair Wanted for N. Y. Bank Holdup.

By the Associated Press.

Topeka, Kans., April 16.—Two desperadoes who blazed their way to freedom by wounding a G-man and a bystander in a trap in the Topeka postoffice today and kidnaped a country doctor and farmer in a mad flight into Nebraska were reported captured tonight by Sheriff Homer Sylvester, of Plattsmouth, Nebr.

Wayne W. Baker, 27, F. B. I. agent on his first major assignment, was probably fatally wounded by four bullets, and O. D. Davis, 45, a bystander, was shot in the foot in the burst of gunfire in the postoffice lobby.

Two other Federal agents returned the fire, wounding one of the gangsters in the left forearm.

Escape Car Wrecked.

The fugitives, identified by J. Edgar Hoover as Gerald Lewis and Robert Suhay—hunted for the $18,000 robbery of the Northern Westchester Bank, of Katonah, N. Y., March 12—fled in a black coupe which they wrecked on a concrete bridge near Sabetha, Kans., near the Nebraska border. The machine bore Ohio license plates.

Report of their capture was made by Night Detective Chief Harry Green at Plattsmouth following a telephone conversation with Sheriff Sylvester.

Stranded, the bandits halted Farmer Joe Carver and forced him to drive them to his nearby home and telephone Dr. Sam Hibbard to treat the wound.

After receiving treatment, the gunmen warned Carver not to follow them, then cut his telephone line, kidnaped Dr. Hibbard and drove several miles north toward Lincoln, Nebr., before ejecting him from his automobile, in which they continued their flight.

Talked of Topeka "Scrape."

The wounded bandit talked freely, Carver said, once remarking he had "been in a shooting scrape with some Topeka policemen, and I came out a little better than the other fellow." He apparently referred to Baker.

The desperadoes' gunplay precipitated a determined manhunt throughout Nebraska and Kansas by Federal agents, State and local police.

They were reported sighted early tonight near Union, Nebr., by Police Captain George Valentine, of Lincoln. Federal and State officers spread a net around Lincoln and patrolled country lanes as well as highways.

Bandaged Wound.

When Dr. Hibbard arrived at the Carver farm house, the pair forced the physician to drive them to Sabetha in his automobile and go to his office, where he bandaged the arm wound.

After being ejected from his car, Hibbard hitchhiked a ride back to Sabetha and told his story. He was unharmed.

Earlier, the two fugitives had appeared casually at the postoffice, and one of them called for a package which Federal agents had marked. There were three agents who had posted themselves in separated positions for three days.

At a previously designated signal from a clerk at the mail window, Baker stepped forward, covered the suspect and ordered him to put up his hands. In answer, the second fugitive opened fire, shooting the agent in the back. Baker whirled and another bullet struck him in the chest. Two more bullets struck him in the legs.

Women Crawl Under Table.

The bystander, Davis, was writing at one of the lobby tables.

A Mrs. Bunch, who was standing at a desk in the half-block-long lobby, said:

"I heard some man holler 'I'm shot.'

"There were two white girls standing beside me and as soon as the shots were fired, we all fell on the floor and got under the table.

"There must have been a dozen shots before I saw the man (Baker) fall. Then two other men began

40-Hour Week Sidestepped by Textile Parley

Issue to Be Referred to Labor Conference in Geneva.

By Franklyn Waltman.

Preparing to end its meeting here today, the World Textile Conference yesterday declined to take a definite stand on a 40-hour work week within the international textile industry, passing that question, with recommendation, on to the International Labor Conference which meets at Geneva in June.

Victor Vandeputte, workers' delegate from France, demanded the conference announce its discussions had "shown the need" for reduction of hours within the industry. Had his proposal been adopted it would have been tantamount to a recommendation for a 40-hour work week to the coming Geneva conference.

Thomas Ashurst, employers' delegate from Great Britain, however, took a determined stand against including the Vandeputte suggestion in the conference's report on social problems of the textile industry. He declared that British employers were "prepared to allow any suggestion on working hours to go back to Geneva" and he added that if the French amendment were adopted he would move to delete the entire summary from the report.

Arthur Shaw, British workers' delegate, expressed astonishment at his colleague's attitude, asserting he did not regard it as "playing the game." Charles Picquenard,

Witness Denies Making Threat To Harlan Man

Charged With Attempting Intimidation at Door of Hearing Room.

(An Editorial on This Subject—Page 6.)

By Sidney Olson.

Burly Ted Creech, mine superintendent, who swaggered to the witness chair, sat pale-faced and damp-browed before the Senate Civil Liberties Committee last night as he stubbornly denied he had tried to intimidate a previous witness during the noon hour.

Creech lost his air of bravado after Deputy United States Marshal Walter L. Bonham testified to the committee and a tense crowd of spectators that Creech had threatened R. C. Tackett, now under arrest and in Bonham's custody. Bonham, white-haired, but sturdy, said:

"Tackett, who is in my custody, and I were standing here by the hearing room door. Tackett was talking to another man when Creech came along and interrupted, saying: 'Well, Tackett, you've put the coal operators of Harlan County in a fix. When we get back there, I'll see to it that you go back up for another eight or ten years.'"

Study Perjury Charge.

Bonham added Tackett answered, "I've never seen you before in my life." Tackett confirmed this.

Senators Robert M. La Follette, jr. (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Elbert D. Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, last night were studying the situation to see if Creech can be charged with either perjury or tampering with a witness.

Creech came back to the stand, still swaggering, but nervous. He sat at first with his back to the committee.

La Follette, grim and angry, ordered:

"Face the committee."

Creech swung around in the swivel chair, but put his hands over his face as photographers focused on him.

"Drop your hands," La Follette shouted impatiently.

Creech dropped his hands and blurted out, in an aside to the cameramen: "Go ahead, big boy. Shoot it."

Tampering Charge.

La Follette then asked Creech if the statements of Tackett and Marshal Bonham were true. Creech said:

"Why, Tackett came up to me and said he was drunk the other day when he made his statement. We were just kidding."

As the hearing room broke into an uproar, La Follette called Mar-

Wheeler Film Attack on Court Change Is Censored in Kansas

Prediction He Would Lose Patronage Deleted in March of Time Movie; Senator 'Wonders' if Washington Gave Order.

A prediction by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, that the Administration will strip him of patronage in retaliation for his fight on the President's court plan has been deleted from the current issue of March of Time by the Kansas State Board of Review.

This announcement, made here last night by the Washington office of the motion picture organization, drew the statement from Wheeler that the action "ought to qualify the Governor of that State for the dictatorship of the United States."

The Senator also wondered, he added, if "orders" to the board of review had been sent from Washington.

The deleted section of the film, which was devoted to "a survey of the Nation-wide controversy over the plan to increase the number of justices in the court," and to the fight on the Wagner labor bill, read as follows:

"You can say that the privilege of appointing postmasters will not be accorded to me. You can say that I'll get no more projects for my State. You can say what you please, but I say to you and to Mr. Farley, to everybody else, that I will vote against this proposition because it is morally wrong; it is morally unsound; it is a dangerous proceeding."

The chairman or the Kansas board, Miss Mae Clausen, denied "orders

Ship Purchase By Soviets in U. S. Is Barred

State Department Bans Sale of Material for Battle Craft.

By the Associated Press.

Objections by the State Department stood last night in the way of an effort by Soviet Russia to purchase materials in this country for a battleship.

The department's arms and munitions control board has informed two American corporations, whose names were not disclosed, that although the export of such materials might be permissible under the licensing provisions of the neutrality act, this Government has objections to such a transaction.

Representatives of the two companies told the board early in March they held contracts with the Soviet government for the delivery of designs, materials and equipment for the construction of one battleship in the Soviet Union.

They were told by Joseph C. Greene, chief of the Munitions Control Board, that barring unforeseen changes in present treaties and statutes the shipment of such items abroad would fall under the provisions of the neutrality act prohibiting exports of "arms, ammunition and implements of war," except under Government licenses.

He held that such materials would constitute a disassembled vessel of war.

It was emphasized that exactly the same objections would apply if any other country rather than Soviet Russia, were involved.

One specification of the provisional contract, it was pointed out, provided the United States Navy should test and inspect the guns and armor for the contemplated battleship before they could be delivered. One of the requirements under the proposed contract was that the guns be of 16-inch caliber.

The corporations were told it has been a long-standing policy of this Government to disassociate itself entirely from the promotion of export trade in munitions. Under such circumstances, it was said, the Government felt that the Navy should not be called upon to make any such tests.

Deciding Battle For Famishing Bilbao Is Near

Basque Defenders Cling to Last Lines After Fierce Fighting.

By the Associated Press.

St. Jean de Luz, France, April 16.—Basque defenders of Bilbao clung tonight to the last line of their mountainous defenses in a fierce battle with insurgent besiegers.

The advantage swung three times during the day-long fight for the heights of Saibi peak, guarding the plains 5 miles from the key city of Durango, itself only 16 miles southeast of Bilbao.

As darkness fell the government forces had recaptured the peak from which they were driven earlier with casualties of from 700 to 1,000 men in their army of 5,000.

Both sides, evidently, were girding for a crucial battle for possesion of the Basque capital, besieged by land and blockaded by sea with its war-swelled population of more than 350,000 reported close to starvation.

A British merchant vessel was reported to have been stopped 16 miles off Bilbao by a British destroyer which ordered it to return

World Wheat Prices Collapse In Selling Rush

Worst Break in Several Years Sends U. S. Level Down 5-Cent Limit.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, April 16.—A tremendous selling wave today caused the worst collapse of world wheat prices in recent years.

Market commentators were not in agreement as to the factors precipitating the deluge of sales that demoralized all wheat trading centers, plunging North American prices downward the 5-cent limit for the day, while foreign markets broke 7 to more than 9 cents in some cases.

Chicago May wheat crashed 5 cents a bushel at the opening gong as bewildered brokers flung selling orders at each other. Then as millions of bushels changed hands the market rallied a cent or more and hung at this level for three hours before dropping anew to the bottom limit just before the close.

May wheat closed for the day at $1.29⅞, a loss of 8 cents in two days and 15 cents below the eight-year peak established at $1.45½ scarcely more than a week ago. Liverpool May wheat plunged to $1.35¾, while Winnipeg May dropped to $1.31⅞.

After the markets closed, many observers attributed the selling in part to the slackening of European

Loans, to Be Paid By Births, Offered To Italian Couples

Rome, April 16.—Italy offered today to lend up to $150 to her youth to encourage marriage, and to let them pay off the loan with children.

The cabinet authorized the loans of from $50 to $150 by decree and ordered an annual government contribution of $25,000 to foster a Fascist union of big families.

The decrees were the latest manifestations of Italy's program to check a declining birth rate.

Engaged persons must be under 26 years of age to qualify for the loans. The registration of birth of a child to a married couple automatically will reduce their loan by 10 percent. Additional births will permit continued reductions. Repayment of the loan must begin within a year after marriage, however, if no children have been born within the 12-month span.

Gen. Jay Morrow, Ex-Commissioner, Succumbs in N. J.

Gen. Jay J. Morrow, brother of the late Senator Dwight W. Morrow, former Governor of the Canal Zone and District Commissioner during the Administration of President Theodore Roosevelt, died suddenly last night at his home in Englewood, N. J. He was 67 years old.

A native of West Virginia, Gen. Morrow was with the Panama Canal Administration from 1915 to 1917. During the World War he was Division Engineer of the Fourth Division and Chief Engineer of the First American Army. He served as engineer of maintenance of the Canal from 1919 until 1921 when he was appointed Governor.

Surviving Gen. Morrow are three sisters, Mrs. Agnes Scandrett, of Washington; Miss Alice Morrow and Mrs. Edwin McIlvaine. He also leaves a niece, Mrs. Rebecca Greathouse, of Washington.

Policeman Faces 50 Ticket-Fixing Charges; Collateral Office to Close, Rules Tightened

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A current investigation of reported "ticket fixing" practices within the police traffic division will soon result in specific charges against at least one policeman, it was learned last night.

And coincident with this report official orders were issued yesterday abolishing the central traffic collateral and ticket adjustment office and establishing rigid rules of administration.

For more than two weeks, it was learned, police officials have been investigating alleged "fixing" of traffic violation notices in the collateral bureau. Inspector L. I. H. Edwards, assistant superintendent of police, is conducting the inquiry.

Within the next few days, it was reported, a policeman—who since has been transferred from the collateral office—will face nearly 50 specific accusations of quashing traffic charges.

Police Superintendent Ernest W. Brown confirmed reports of the investigation last night, but refused to divulge details or identity of the man involved. He did not indicate whether the "fixing" charges would reach to other units of the department.

"I am not prepared to make a statement at this time," said Maj. Brown, "other than say that such an investigation is under way."

Recently Maj. Brown condemned so-called "ticket fixing" activities and warned members of his command that any attempts to cancel traffic charges would not be tolerated.

It is understood that complaints against the suspected policeman came from outside the Police Department.

Beginning Monday, under an order from Maj. Brown yesterday, operations of the central ticket col-

Jones Point Site for Memorial Urged; Tidal Basin Test Asked

By Gerald G. Gross

Jones Point on the Potomac, historic southernmost tip of the District's original 10-mile square, was advanced yesterday as the ideal site solution of the Thomas Jefferson Memorial problem.

The river location, said Charles R. Hooff, of Alexandria, would make the memorial easily accessible to the thousands of motorists who make the pilgrimage to Washington's homestead and tomb via the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, command a peerless view of Jefferson's Virginia hills, as well as the National Capital and provide a logical connecting link between Lincoln Memorial and Mount Vernon.

Its selection, besides, would save the Japanese cherry blossoms around the Tidal Basin from the doom they now face if the memorial is placed in that area, said Hooff, who has interested several prominent Alexandrians in the proposal.

Opponents of the Tidal Basin site, which has been approved by the Court Hearings' End Expected By Vote Today

Judge Speaks for Plan; Senate Fight Seen on Anti-Lynch Bill.

Preparing for the first show-down battle today over the President's court reorganization plan, the Senate Judiciary Committee last night adjourned after its heaviest session of hearings since they began nearly six weeks ago.

The six witnesses who appeared yesterday, two against the program and four in favor of it, are probably the last the committee will hear, as all indications point to a vote in executive session today to close the hearings and begin the second phase of the fight.

For the first time, a Circuit Court judge, tall, crisply-spoken William Denman, of the Ninth Circuit, appeared before the committee. Judge Denman appeared as a proponent of the plan, at least in regard to its effect on the lower courts, while he steered clear of any indications that he favored the court bill as it affects the Supreme Court.

Urges Lower Court Change.

He campaigned in vigorous language, however, for an overhauling of the lower courts, criticizing delays of justice in the processes of the courts as "gross mismanagement," and stating flatly that "the responsibility for the present denial of justice lies in the administrative inertia of the overwhelmed judges as they cling to obsolete legalistic concepts of the obligation of an American court to its litigants."

He outlined at length the denial of justice from the fatigue of overworked judges, blasted President A. Lawrence Lowell of Harvard University as "apparently ignorant of the facts," and urged clean-ups of case arrearages.

A hint of the pending Senate battle over the Gavagan anti-lynching bill passed Thursday by the House came when a brilliant young colored attorney, John B. Davis, appearing for the President's bill, was cross-examined mercilessly by Senators Tom Connally, of Texas, and Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, both Democrats.

Davis Keeps Temper.

Davis testified calmly and with good temper as Connally and Burke sought to show that the colored people, as represented by Davis, wanted an enlarged Supreme Court in the hope it would validate measures such as the Gavagan anti-lynch bill.

Connally and Burke also sought to show Davis wanted "judges with advanced social viewpoints" who would validate legislation requiring Southern States to grant colored persons all social privileges granted white people, such as abolition of "Jim Crow" street and railway cars, intermingling in theaters, restaurants and schools.

Connally, at one point admonishing reporters to "busy your pencils," insisted he was a friend of the colored race, and had defended colored men in actions against white men, but added:

"While I'm opposed to lynchings, I don't believe in the Gavagan bill because it invades the police powers of the States just when we've reduced lynchings to an infinitesimal condition."

"Poorhouse of Nation."

Davis, who bore up patiently under the grilling, said that "as a practical matter" no bills of the force type were sought, but that the "general economic and social advancement of the South, the poorhouse of the Nation, must be considered in the decade to come."

Other witnesses included Smith W. Brookhart, former Republican Senator from Iowa, who favored the President's program; Wallace C. Calvert, D. D., minister of Grace Episcopal Church, Indianapolis, and the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman.

Holding his opinion to be "broadly representative of a vast and ever-increasing number of our citizens," Bishop Freeman criticized "the lust for charge," and said:

"We are suddenly advised that a check upon ill-advised legislation has now become an obstacle and a hindrance to the achievement of national ideals."

Seen Inciting "Anarchy."

"The unjust, ungenerous and at times violent criticism of our judiciary; the flippant, careless, if not reckless censure passed upon those who sit in our highest judicial tribunal, may do more to give a fresh impulse to lawlessness and to provoke disorder if not anarchy in our corporate life than all the constituted authorities may be able to restrict and restrain for a generation to come."

The unpaid mayor of Austin, Texas, Thomas Miller, appeared before the committee as a proponent of the court program. He said the recent Texas election of Lyndon B. Johnson to the House of Representatives on a platform of "out-and-out acceptance of the President's bill" was a strong contrast to the testimony recently of a "hand-picked" delegation of 60 Texans who told the committee the State was against the plan.

Textile Conference Develops Groundwork for Important Future International Co-operation.

By Franklyn Waltman

DURING the last two weeks approximately 200 men and women of a score of nationalities have been meeting daily in the Labor Department auditorium to discuss the problems of the international textile industry and to explore measures for stabilizing that industry as well as raising the standard of living for the 14,000,000 workers who gain a livelihood from it.

WALTMAN.

Known as the Tripartite Technical Conference on the Textile Industry, the meeting of this group has been an experiment in international efforts toward settlement of world problems. Held under auspices of the International Labor Orgonization, the conference brought together representatives of governments and textile employers and workers.

Now that the meeting nears an end, some appraisal of its work and achievements is in order. There has been nothing sensational about this meeting. Its activities could not compete in the daily news with the more momentous occurrences on the Washington scene, such as the recent Supreme Court decisions—which, incidentally, also had direct relation to labor problems. Nevertheless, this textile conference has been an important event and the spade work done here may bring forth abundant fruit in international progress and co-operation in the economic field during many years to come.

* * * *

In specific tangible achievements not very much can be claimed by this conference. But it was not intended that the Washington meeting should arrive at agreements or undertakings. The purpose was to explore the facts regarding the industry and this has been done with thoroughness. In adjourning, the conference has adopted general principles to guide negotiators of future agreements.

The hope that out of this conference might come a recommendation to the International Labor Conference which meets at Geneva in June for a 40-hour week went a-glimmering yesterday when the British employer delegate took a determined stand against such action. Prospects for a convention providing for the 40-hour work week in textiles at Geneva in June are not bright—but that objective has by no means been permanently lost. The time for it has not yet arrived.

An interesting suggestion, however, which the conference adopted was that the governments of textile-producing countries might "contemplate the establishment of an international commission to consider production and prices in the textile industry as a whole" and in this connection it was said that greater balance in the world textile industry involves to a certain degree industrial planning on an international scale.

The important accomplishment of the conference, in the view of observers, was the progress made by virtually all the delegations in achieving a better understanding of the problems which confront the industry. Rather remarkable was the apparently small amount of knowledge that each delegation had of the problems of the industry in other nations. Each group came to the conference convinced that its own textile industry was sorely afflicted, but without realizing the difficulties which attended the industry in other nations.

Thus the Japanese have achieved a better understanding of what their competition has meant to the textile industry of this country and Great Britain and of the reasons underlying agitation for the erection of tariff barriers and embargoes against Nipponese cloth.

As a result, a distinct hope has been aroused among the leaders of the conference that the Japanese will in time take steps to improve working standards within their country in order to bring about a closer approximation to such standards in other countries and thus escape the cause of economic repressive measures against them.

At all events, Harold Butler, the delightfully English director of the International Labor Office, is preparing to leave Washington greatly encouraged by the prospects for international co-operation to raise working standards in the textile industry. Having drafted the I. L. O. constitution, along with the late Samuel Gompers, Henry M. Robinson and others at the Paris Peace Conference, Mr. Butler has been associated ever since with the I. L. O. and he has come to learn that the world cannot be made over in a day.

"We have made progress slowly," he asserted yesterday. "And in democratic countries I know of no other way that progress can be made if lasting results are to be achieved."

New Dealers might ponder that statement with value to themselves and to this country!

Perhaps the greatest achievement of the textile conference has been the demonstration that it has given that we are living in a new economic era in which industrialists may no longer conduct their enterprises as they see fit, without regard for their workers. In strong contrast with the co-operative spirit of this meeting where workers and employers together discussed their problems, was the exhibition of feudalism which apparently still exists in Harlan County, Ky., given yesterday by Senator La Follette's Committee on Civil Liberties.

The day of the feudal lord in industry is gone. This is the lesson of the textile conference as well as of our Supreme Court decisions within the last month. It is smart to face that fact realistically.

Tests Must Decide Effect if Tidal Basin Is Used, Engineer Asserts.

Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, took new hope yesterday when Maj. Walter D. Luplow, District War Department engineer, stated emphatically that the basin's usefulness and availability as a flushing agent for Washington channel must not be impaired or destroyed

"I am not opposed to the idea of altering the shape of basin," he said, "as long as its practical function is not affected. It might take scale-model tests to decide whether the plans of the memorial commission for dividing the present basin into three parts would be satisfactory, in so far as the flushing factor is concerned."

He also pointed out that the commission will have to submit detailed plans for the drastic alterations before his office can determine feasibility of the scheme, conceived by John Russell Pope, architect. Although the commission, headed by Representative John J. Boylan, of New York, announced final approval of both the location and the design of the memorial two months ago, it has not yet forwarded to the engineer's office specific plans for treatment of the Tidal Basin.

As an integral factor in maintenance and development of the Washington waterfront, over which the War Department has control by act of Congress, the Potomac Park Tidal Basin figures vitally in the engineer office's present program to beautify and enhance Washington Channel.

Who Has Precedence?

To the citizenry and visitors the artificial lake, now almost a half century old, is primarily a recreational spot distinguished chiefly by its unique cherry blossom display. To the Army it is equally esteemed as a channel cleanser whose twice-daily flushing cannot be dispensed with.

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Commission, given dictatorial powers by Congress as a result of the bill drafted by Representative Boylan, voted to go ahead with complete remodeling of the Tidal Basin without first submitting detailed plans to the War Department engineers.

Maj. Luplow said he was at a loss to say which would have precedence, his department or the memorial commission, should it be found that the Pope scheme would curtail or eliminate the basin's usefulness. On the basis of general—not specific—information furnished by the Boylan group, Maj. Luplow has submitted a report to Secretary of War Woodring who, in turn, sent it to the memorial commission, the engineer asserted.

Commenting on Boylan's assertion that as long ago as 1791 Maj. L'Enfant, who laid out the National Capital, envisaged the erection of a monument on the spot which has been selected, Hooff pointed out that Jones Point was paid the same compliment in the same year.

Member of an old Virginia family and a student of early American history, the Alexandrian cited the address of the Rev. James Muir when the Jones Point cornerstone was dedicated on April 21, 1791.

"From this stone," Mr. Muir said in part, "may a superstructure arise whose glory, whose magnificence, whose stability unequaled hitherto shall astonish the world and invite even the savage of the wilderness to take shelter under its roof."

Jones Point, which is on a line with Lee street extended in Alexandria, is within a few hundred yards of the Mount Vernon Memorial Highway, Hooff said. If plans for making the boulevard a by-pass around Alexandria are eventually fulfilled, tourists bound for Mount Vernon would go directly past the memorial, he continued.

FCA Head Hits Low Interest On Farm Loans

Myers Predicts Land Boom Unless 'Artificial' Rate Is Raised by U. S.

land bank loans, the House was preparing to call up Tuesday the new farm tenancy bill, carrying $135,000,000 in first-year appropriations, and authorizing rehabilitation and farm-purchase loans at 3 per cent.

The farm tenancy measure is one of three unbudgeted bills, carrying total appropriations of $285,000,000. They are being pressed at the Capitol in the face of Administration warnings that additional spending must inevitably be followed by a tax bill. The other measures are the Harrison-Black bill for a Federal education subsidy to the States, due for a skirmish in the Senate Monday, and the Wagner housing bill, about to be reported from committee.

The farm tenancy measure provides $75,000,000 for five-year rehabilitation loans to farmers at 3 per cent. Another $50,000,000 would provide loans to tenants to purchase farms, at terms of 30 years and 3 per cent. Another $10,000,000 would finance Government purchase of submarginal land.

Myers told the Agriculture Committee the cost to the Treasury of the emergency 3½ per cent land bank rate would be $31,700,000 a year, if continued. The cost would be $10,800,000 a year if the rate returned to 4½ per cent, he said. The original rate was 5 per cent. Later it was reduced to 4½ per cent and finally to 3½ per cent.

Myers said these reductions, brought about by collapse of farm prices, "presumably" were emergency measures.

Union Worker Is Withdrawn At G. M. Parley

Premier Wins in Demand as Oshawa Peace Move Is Made.

W. officials and representatives of the General Motors Corporation, parent to the Canadian company, and that the strikers would be asked to approve the plan at a mass meeting tonight.

Martin tonight switched his attack to the Ford Motor Co. and said the union would charge Ford with violation of the Wagner labor disputes act.

He declared the La Follette Senate Committee investigating civil liberties violations also would be asked to look at the relations between Henry Ford and his employes.

"We will have Ford definitely on the run by Monday," Martin said, refusing to elaborate on the nature of the charges he said the union would file with the National Labor Relations Board.

Several times recently Ford, in newspaper interviews, has advised his employes not to join unions. The unions, he said, were controlled by "international financiers" who were trying to eliminate industrial competition.

In the General Motors strike Martin would not disclose the terms of the "understanding" he said had been reached, but some observers took a statement from Harry J. Carmichael, vice president of General Motors of Canada, Ltd., as a hint.

Carmichael's statement issued without comment:

"For the purpose of ending the present strike in the General Motors plants of Canada, upon the condition that the workers will call the strike off and return to work, we hereby agree to meet the committees from the various General Motors plants in Canada and enter into an agreement with them concerning wages, hours, and working conditions, the negotiations to begin immediately upon the termination of the strike."

Union recognition was the principal issue. The strikers walked out April 8 because the company refused to recognize the United Automobile Workers, a Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, as their agent for collective bargaining. The company said it was willing to draw up an agreement with a local union committee, but not with the international union.

At that point, Premier Mitchell Hepburn focused international attention on the walkout by taking sides with the company and saying Ontario had no room for either the Lewis labor movement or "foreign agitators."

Just last night, Hepburn renewed his invitation to General Motors and the strikers to send representatives to his office for a peace conference.

Trolley Strike in Akron.

Akron, Ohio, April 16 (AP).—Street car operators went on strike in Akron today, and thousands of persons without automobiles hitchhiked or trudged home tonight.

Ford Workers to Meet.

Detroit, April 16 (AP).—Walter Reuther, president of the West Side local, United Automobile Workers, announced tonight that "open mass meetings of Ford workers will be held to discuss problems and formulate demands" in the near future.

Before starting an airplane flight to address Ford workers from the air through amplifiers as they left company plants in Dearborn, Reuther said the union plans to open branch offices near the factories.

He added that the local "has organized several thousand Ford workers already."

Wireless Strike Settled.

New York, April 16 (AP).—An early morning conference in an exclusive Fifth avenue apartment house brought quick settlement today to a strike that threatened to tie up the 17 ocean-going ships of International Mercantile Marine and its subsidiaries.

The settlement, which followed the first invocation of the Wagner labor relations act by an employer in this district, was hailed as a "complete victory" by Mervyn Rathborne, head of the Radio Operators Union, who called the strike yesterday.

Kansas Puts Ban On Wheeler Film

from Washington," according to a United Press dispatch from Kansas City. She said:

"We had no orders from Washington, as Senator Wheeler hints.

"We had no word from Gov. Walter Huxman, either.

"The board is made up of two Republicans, Mrs. L. H. Chapman and Mrs. J. R. Stowers, and myself, a Democrat."

Calls Governor Dictator.

"Of course, this is a denial of free speech and qualifies the Governor of Kansas for dictatorship in the United States," Wheeler added. "If Mr. Roosevelt can pack the Supreme Court, the Governor of Kansas, if elected President, could say we needed a court to override the bill of rights and he would do it to meet the needs of the times.

"This is one of the best reasons I know of why we should not tamper with the Constitution or the Surpreme Court.

The March of Time announcement said:

"Orders to cut the speech were received by T. B. Thompson, branch manager of RKO Radio Pictures, Inc., in Kansas City, in charge of distribution of the March of Time in that territory, from Miss Clausen, * * * who wrote, 'We are approving the print of the March of Time No. 9 with elimination of the entire dialogue by Senator Wheeler. We feel this dialogue is partisan and biased.'

"To the best of our knowledge this is the first time that a statement on a national politics' issue by an accredited authority like a U. S. Senator has been censored from the screen by a State board."

Railroad Strike Again Prevented

eigh Arnold, San Francisco lawyer. This board has called a meeting in San Francisco next Tuesday.

Despite appointment of the board by the President, the two unions went ahead with their strike plans. Train crews were directed to take trains into terminals before quitting, and yard crews were ordered to leave their work at the hour set. It appeared the country was to witness its first "illegal" strike in defiance of the railway labor act.

Revocation of the strike order means possibly a 60-day delay in any tie-up that may occur.

The emergency board members are given up to 30 days to study the questions involved and submit a report to the President. Another 30 days is then provided in which to bring about an adjustment of the dispute.

Bandits Seized After Shooting Federal Agent

Pair Escapes Kansas Trap, Kidnaps Doctor Before Capture in Nebraska.

shooting at a fellow who was running out of the lobby."

C. C. McComas, who operates a food market across the street from the postoffice, said:

"The two came out first, on a dog trot, the agents just behind them.

"One dropped an arm at his side, probably wounded. They continued shooting as they crossed the street, to the northwest corner where the car was parked."

(Today's shooting was the first in which G-men participated since the sensational capture in New York last December of Bank Robber Harry Brunette. On that occasion a small army of policemen and Federal agents took part in a 45-minute battle in which tear gas was used to drive the outlaw from his upper West Side hideout. A storm of protests against Hoover's "sensationalism" followed. Today's attempted capture with only three agents was in sharp contrast.)

Top-notch G-men clamped secrecy on their part in the story. They were in constant conference, led by Dwight Brantley, agent in charge at Kansas City.

Even the condition of Baker, who underwent an emergency operation for removal of several of the bullets, was sheathed in elaborate secrecy. However, it was known that the agent's condition was critical and that his associates were prepared for possible blood transfusions.

Hoover said Baker, a native of Yuma, Ariz., entered the bureau in 1933 as a law clerk.

Baker Unmarried.

In 1936 Baker enrolled in the special training course for Federal agents and when he was graduated early this year he was assigned to the branch at Kansas City. He is unmarried.

Three men held up the Katonah Bank March 12, two weeks after Merle Vanderbush, Midwestern desperado, had looted it of $17,600 only to be captured with two companions a few miles away.

Gerald Lewis and Robert Suhay were named as the men who committed the second robbery by New York Department of Justice agents three weeks ago.

Bandit Killed, Pal Hunted.

Boston, April 16 (AP).—A Statewide alarm was broadcast tonight for the accomplice of a man shot to death today when he tried to kill a policeman investigating the wounding of a State trooper.

With the death of William Dickens, 24, of Brookline, Police Capt. John J. McGrath said he was convinced Dickens was implicated in the shooting of State Trooper Domenico Guiffrida in a wild chase last night.

At the same time police said two stolen cars yielded a shotgun, six rifles, six gas bombs and a half-dozen sets of automobile registration plates.

The shooting occurred in the Allston section, where Patrolmen Michael Cullinane and George Doherty had under surveillance a series of community garages.

Dickens stepped out of an automobile and approached a garage door. The officers walked toward him. As he pulled a pistol from his pocket, Cullinane sent a volley into his body.

During the excitement Cullinane received a shower of shotgun pellets in the arm. Dickens' companion speed away.

Washington Is Chosen For Speakers' Sessions

Announcement that Washington has been selected for the 1938 convention of the Eastern Public Speaking Conference was received here today by Curtis Hodges, executive director of the Greater National Capital committee, from the retiring president of the conference, Jane D. Zimmerman, of Columbia University, New York.

British Peer Urges Coronation Boycott To Avoid Gouging

San Francisco, April 16 (AP).—An English Lord advised Americans today to stay way from the coronation of King George VI unless they want to be "overcharged for hotels, overcharged for seats to view the coronation, and generally exploited."

Lord Marley, British Laborite and former lord-in-waiting to King George V, urged the coronation boycott in an interview here, declaring he opposed the "general commercialization" of the event and the "attempt to make a profit." The outspoken peer is here to aid the Jewish National Welfare fund drive.

T. B. Cure Is Sought In Blubber of Seals

Salt Lake City, April 16 (AP).—A black-haired, 48-year-old Jesuit priest announced plans today for an expedition to the Far North to seek in the blubber of seals a preventive for tuberculosis.

The Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, S. J., famed "glacier priest," explorer, author and lecturer, said he would leave Seattle, Wash., May 20 for his eleventh northland expedition—this time to King Island in the Bering Sea. The trip will last a year and a half.

Witness Denies Making Threat To Harlan Man

Charged With Attempting Intimidation at Door of Hearing Room.

shal Bonham back to the stand and banged for order. Several Kentuckians were standing up in the audience waving their fists at Creech and shouting.

Bonham then repeated his previous testimony and stated Tackett had been constantly in his custody. La Follette then adjourned the hearings until Tuesday.

In order to place a perjury charge against Creech, who had been named by a number of other witnesses as responsible for "terrorism of all kinds," the Senators must show a lie was told about a piece of material evidence, or a material statement in contradiction to facts bearing directly on the testimony was made, the committee attorneys said.

A charge of tampering with a witness might hold up, however, it was stated.

The dramatic conclusion of the hearings came after two long sessions in which Tackett's previous testimony was challenged by dapper Walter B. Smith, prosecuting attorney for Bell County, which borders Harlan County.

Tackett Called Liar.

Tackett, released from the Bell County jail to appear before the committee, had testified Smith had conferred with a group of men who plotted the dynamiting of a union organizer's home.

Smith said: "That was a deliberate lie."

La Follette snapped: "You're in no position to say whether it was deliberate." After Smith tried vainly to read a lengthy statement into the record, he left the stand, and Tackett, recalled, reasserted his previous statements.

In the tension of the smoke-hung hearing room, in which standing room only had been available all day, with Capitol police meticulously searching for firearms all spectators or witnesses who bulged suspiciously, the drawling testimony of the mountaineers who seek freedom to organize for collective bargaining, and of the men who avowedly oppose such organization, took on added drama as the day wore on.

Harlan Terrorism.

During the morning session the committee had heard how enforcement of the law in Harlan County is entrusted to a list of deputy sheriffs who have lengthy criminal records, who are employed and paid by the coal operators.

They listened to the circuit court and grand jury records relating a long history of murdered witnesses, intimidation of jurymen and the consistent fight of the coal operators to halt any steps forward in union organization.

Pearl Bassham, a slight man with a fringe of red hair around his bald head, the vice president of the Harlan-Wallins Coal Co., told the committee how he had imposed a "yellow dog" contract on his employes, denying them all union privileges.

La Follette asked, "Have you ever heard of the Wagner labor relations act?"

Bassham said he had read about it somewhere "once," but that his lawyer had mentioned it to him for the first time this week.

Bassham characterized Charles Middleton, a Harlan-Wallins deputy, as a "very good policeman," after which La Follette read into the record a long string of indictments of Middleton for crimes ranging from murder to mayhem.

While questioning Sheriff Theodore R. Middleton of Harlan County (revealed the day before as owning an interest in coal companies, a fourth interest in the county's only wholesale liquor store, and as being bonded by 11 coal operators), La Follette outlined the records of Middleton's appointees as deputies.

371 Hired by Operators.

Middleton has admitted he pays eight or nine deputies from the sheriff's funds, and that the other 371 are paid by the coal companies. La Follette said that of the 379 deputies appointed by Middleton, 37 have served time in the State penitentiary, 3 have served Federal sentences and 64 have been indicted.

Slemp Middleton, the sheriff's brother, was described in a court order for removal read by LaFollette as "violent and lawless' and "one of the most dangerous men."

He also read a statement from an order of removal for a cousin, John Middleton, to another district, on a charge of wilful murder, because "it is personally known to the judge of this judicial district that there has been more crime in Harlan County than any county in the State of Kentucky, that there has been almost a total disregard for the law * * * and there now exist more than 800 commonwealth cases on the dockets of Harlan County, many of the charges being against the Middleton family, which is one of the largest families in Harlan County, and a great deal of intimidation of witnesses, and even killing of witnesses have taken place in this county, local jurymen are afraid to do their duty."

In the afternoon, William M. Clontz, regional organizer for the United Mine Workers of America, said "Ted Creech showed me his .45 one day."

"What was the occasion?" asked LaFollette.

"I never took time to ask," and Clontz, "I just showed him my heels."

Easier-to-Read Newspapers Are Predicted by Dr. Gallup

A "revolution" in the making of newspapers was predicted yesterday by Dr. George Gallup, director of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

The newspaper of the future, Dr. Gallup asserted, will be printed in larger type. It will have wider columns and cover a broader range of interest. Consequently, he stated, it will be more attractive.

"Of one thing we can be certain," Dr. Gallup said. "The newspaper of tomorrow will be easier to read."

Dr. Gallup, whose weekly poll of public opinion, "America Speaks," appears in The Washington Post, spoke before the fifteenth annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors in the auditorium of the National Press Club.

John H. Sorrels, of the Memphis Commercial-Appeal, replied to Dr. Gallup's contention that research and fact-finding are needed to determine what the public wants in its newspaper. In a talk read for him Sorrels argued that an editor has to "feel" what his readers want, and that no graphs nor charts are going to help him if he lacks that intuition.

Earlier in the day H. L. Mencken, hard-hitting commentator of the Baltimore Sun, offered a plan to rescue the editorial writers from their sad plight, suggesting that they write under their own names, that their stuff be printed in "vociferous" type and that it be illustrated. Then, he said, they might "set the customer to panting, sweating and beating his breast"—something that never can be done with editorials in small type and under one-line heads.

Edson K. Bixby, of the Springfield, Mo., News-Leader, said that, since the radio gives the demagogue more leeway in swaying the public, the responsibility on the press is all the greater.

George Fort Milton, of the Chattanooga News, told how a newspaper gag bill was smothered in the Tennessee Legislature. At the same time he warned against enemies of freedom of the press who "are in the press itself"—men who give only one side of the picture, who deal in half-truths or whole lies, thus putting weapons in the hands of those who oppose a free press.

John Martin, managing editor of Time, told the editors how that magazine handles the "background of the news." Time articles, he said, are written from a certain perspective, the focal point being defined "as it would look to the Man in the Moon." Asked to give an honest opinion of writing in the daily press, Martin said he thought it was not distinguished—that in it "cliches thrive luxuriantly."

Marriner S. Eccies, chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, talked to the editors after the luncheon, but his remarks were off the record.

Editors Supper Guests.

Last night the editors gathered for a buffet supper at the home of Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, later returning to the National Press Club for an entertainment in their honor.

This morning at 10:15 o'clock Webb Miller, European news manager of the United Press, will talk on "Covering the War in Spain." His words will be broadcast nationally.

Count Raoul de Roussy de Sales, New York correspondent of Paris Soir, and W. G. Vorpe, of the Cleveland Plain Dealer, will discuss "The Sunday Newspaper." Thereafter the society will elect officers and consider resolutions.

The convention will close with a luncheon in the Willard Hotel at 1 p. m. Grove Patterson, of the Toledo Blade, will preside, and the speakers will be Harper Sibley, president of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, and Joseph P. Kennedy, chairman of the Maritime Commission.

Dr. Gallup, in emphasizing the need of research to determine how the public feels about its newspaper, said editorial practices developed generations ago are still in vogue.

"I do not want to be a prophet of woe," he said. "Yet I do not see how anyone can stand off and view the newspaper and its competitors (the radio and magazines) without feeling that the newspaper needs to be jarred out of its complacency.

"It has always seemed strange to me that the instinct which guides editors so unerringly in evaluating the reader interest in news, fails so lamentably when it comes to the matter of presenting the news."

"The newspaper has considered its job complete when it has gathered the news, set it in 7-point type and thrown it into the paper. If the reader can't read type this small, if he can't find the story he wants, or its continuation, if he is discouraged by the appearance of a solid column of type, that is his hard luck. The newspaper has done its job.

"Newspapers have done almost everything they can do to make the reader work for what he gets. Editors turn heaven and earth to cover the news—then they bury it, or treat it typographically in a way to defeat its reading."

In this respect, Dr. Gallup said, American newspapers have much to learn from those in England, even though the latter do carry advertisements on their front pages.

"My guess is," Dr. Gallup said, "that newspapers a generation from now will not only be printed in 10-point type, or larger, but they will of necessity abandon the sacred 12-em column. Making newspapers easier to read is a step in the direction of making them easier to understand.

"I see no reason why the newspaper should not extend its domain over the entire realm of ideas and opinions as well as the happenings of the day. I refer particularly to medicine, science, education, religion, labor and social problems.

"Is there anything in the Readers Digest, or in any other magazine, for that matter, which could not be printed with propriety in a newspaper?"

Cites Three-Cornered Fight.

Dr. Gallup reminded the editors that the newspaper was in a three-cornered fight, its adversaries being the radio and the magazine.

"I am just foolish enough to believe," he concluded, "that in such a fight it is safer to trust facts brought to light by research than to trust instinct."

Sorrell's reply, read in his absence by Marvin H. Creager, president of the society, said that in his opinion the value to editors of newspaper reader surveys has been highly overrated. He continued:

"I think if considered too seriously as a measuring rod for successful newspaper making, these surveys will take out of journalism its most precious quality, namely, the intuitive 'feel' of a news executive for the minds and emotions of his readers.

"With all due respect for the statistician, I do believe that an editor can find out more about what his readers want, and what they read, by spending a day riding subways or street cars, than he can poring over graphs and charts and other statistical material. * * *

"An editor has to feel his market. He is successful or unsuccessful depending on his capacity for feeling. No money on earth is going to help the editor who lacks it."

Mencken, first speaker of the day, thought that editorial writers did a good job considering the conditions under which they must work—writing at top speed, with insufficient preparation, and worrying over whether it is in tune with what his boss is thinking.

"The job of the editorial writer," Mencken said, "is actually almost hopeless. He is expected to achieve effects under such cruel handicaps that they would cripple a writer of the first class, working with both arms free. Deprived of the chief strength of any writer—the force and color, such as they are, of his own personality—he carries on his art like a surgeon wearing boxing gloves or an actor with a wooden leg.

"Is there any remedy for this disease—any way to liberate him? Maybe not, but we can at least speculate. If I were the sole editor and proprietor of a newspaper, which God forbid, I think I'd start off by abolishing the editorial page as it now stands. It fails to interest the majority of readers and it fails to persuade the minority. It is a vestigial organ, and most of its old functions have now passed to the columnists and headline writers. It wastes a lot of excellent brain-power, and costs at lot more than it is worth, either to the paper or to the common good."

Here Mencken suggested that editorial writers sign their work and be given more elbow room.

"Would the great masses of the plain people read them—and heed them?" he asked. "Probably not. But that is only saying what I have said already—that the great masses are shy of logic, and can be reached only by appeals to their feelings. That appeal can never be made by intellectual devices It must be made by the arts of the showman. I see no reason why a newspaper, in seeking to put over an idea, should not make use of the expedients already in use by its advertisers, and even by its feature writers.

"That is, I see no reason why it should not employ illustrations for the purpose, and vociferous typography and the style of the radio fireside chat, the auction sale and the college yell.

"The primary object of public argumentation is not to show off the arguer's elegance; it is to set the customer to panting, sweating and beating his breast. That can never be done by putting the thing into small type, and under one-line heads."

Tom Wallace, of the Louisville Times, reminded Mencken that Frank Cobb, of the old New York World, and Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier Journal, were read even though their editorials were not in large type.

Editor Bixby said the radio had opened the door to political showmanship. The demagogue, he said, may become a more powerful charlatan, while the sage, knowing nothing of oratory or pretense, becomes a dolt before the microphone.

Right to Limit Liquor Credit In D.C. Upheld

O'Donoghue Refuses to Enjoin Suspension for Delayed Pay.

Upholding the right of the District's Alcohol Beverage Control Board to term 15 days' credit as a "reasonable extension of credit," Justice Daniel W. O'Donoghue in District Court yesterday refused to issue an injunction to restrain the board from enforcement of a one-day suspension meted out to William S. (Billy) Martin, proprietor of a Wisconsin avenue restaurant because he did not pay a small bill within the allotted period.

Martin, a former Georgetown athlete, allegedly owed about $20 to a distributing company. He is said to have neglected paying the bill for about 35 days and then he was summoned before the Alcohol Board because of an "unusual extension of credit." Meantime the bill had been paid and it was explained the failure to pay it was a mere oversight.

It was shown places such as those maintained by Martin were required to settle their bills promptly, while others were required to pay within a 30-day period. The Martin classification demanded a 15-day settlement period.

Attorneys William Gallagher, W. B. O'Connell, and Harry T. Whelan said the board was abusing its discretionary powers when it decreed such bills should be met in 15 days.

However, Justice O'Donoghue stated the board had authority to make such a ruling unless the ruling was arbitrary and capricious. He dismissed the request for an injunction to restrain a one-day suspension of Martin's license and then, at the request of T. Gillespie Walsh, attorney for the Alcohol Board, struck out a request that portions of the board's answer be withdrawn.

The Martin attorneys said they would seek a special appeal to prevent the board from enforcing its suspension order. Only the United States Court of Appeals can issue that ruling.

Rumania War to Dethrone Carol Threatens As Fascists Fight Expulsion of Nicholas

By the United Press.

Vienna, April 16.—Rumania tonight was reported near revolution or civil war, because of the expulsion of Prince Nicholas from the royal family. It was the gravest crisis since the assassination of Premier I. G. Duca by Iron Guards in 1933. Despite censorship border dispatches reported that peasants, Socialists and Conservatives had concluded an alliance to defend King Carol against the outlawed Iron Guards, who are backing Prince Nicholas.

The bloc reportedly was rallying under the cry: "For each murder committed by the Iron Guards, we will kill ten of them!"

The crisis was precipitated by Prince Nicholas' expulsion because he demanded that his beautiful wife, the former Jane Lucia Deletj, and their 4-year-old son, Peter, be given royal status. Nicholas married in 1931, defying his brother, who immediately dissolved the marriage by royal decree.

The real reason behind Nicholas' expulsion, however, was reported to have been discovery of an Iron Guard plot to stage a coup d'etat and after dethroning King Carol, install Nicholas as King or Regent for young Prince Michael.

King Carol hoped to crush the conspiracy by exiling Nicholas, Balkan experts said.

Whether he will succeed, they added, depends on the army's attitude. They said the present cabinet could not hope to destroy the Iron Guards, because Premier Tatarescu lacked nation-wide prestige. They expected the cabinet to resign.

Nicholas was placed under arrest at his country estate this week. He prepared to go into exile with his wife and child. An order expelling him from the country was suspended, however, and it was reported Nicholas was challenging his brother to force him out.

Nicholas, reports said, was banking heavily on the support of the Fascist, anti-Jewish Iron Guards led by fiery Gen. George Cantacuzeno and Zeles Codeanus.

The Iron Guards, after their dissolution in 1933, reorganized under the name of "All for Our Country League." They have been bitterly hostile to King Carol for his clandestine romance with red-headed Mme. Magda Lupescu, believed to have Jewish blood.

The Iron Guards used Nicholas' expulsion as pretext for a new drive against King Carol and Premier George Tatarescu, who succeeded the slain Duca. Travelers from Rumania said the situation was explosive.

The Iron Guards, they said, were prepared for a showdown over Nicholas' expulsion even if it resulted in civil war.

The Streetcar Probe.

A thorough investigation of streetcars is obviously the best way to protect the public against repetition of Thursday's accident on Georgia avenue. An inquiry into this explosion and fire, which caused the injury of 27 persons, was immediately undertaken by the Public Utilities Commission. By extending its probe to a careful examination of the Capital Transit Co.'s rolling equipment the commission has once more demonstrated its active interest in the public welfare.

Numerous complaints against the equipment used by the transit company have been made in recent years. The reply has always been that the financial condition of the company would not permit the acquisition of new cars for all its lines. Nothing could be gained by pressing the need for modern equipment to a point where the company would be faced by bankruptcy.

But the provision of safe equipment is an entirely different matter. It is the plain duty of the P. U. C. to make certain that the hazards of streetcar operation are reduced to a minimum. Experience indicates that, with the best of equipment, such hazards cannot be entirely eliminated. There can be no excuse, however, for any failure to apply the strictest precautions against fires in crowded cars. If the commission finds that this serious accident was a result of defective equipment, it will have no alternative to ordering replacements without delay.

The company as well as the public should welcome this investigation. If its equipment is found to be safe, charges to the contrary will be refuted. And if dangerous conditions are found to exist, a company so dependent upon public good will should certainly be eager to correct them.

The Gavagan Bill.

Mississippi's Montgomery County shows little sign of taking action against those implicated in the Duck Hill lynchings. The sheriff and deputy in the case steadfastly maintain they could not identify any of the mob which snatched the two Negroes from their custody. The grand jury is "investigating," but it is commonly conceded that even if indictments are obtained no convictions will follow. In the more enlightened community of Jackson this atrocious crime has aroused a feeling of outrage. But State officials, including the Governor, are powerless to intervene without invitation from the county authorities.

This apathy for law and order is particularly unfortunate because it contributed largely to the passage of the Gavagan anti-lynching bill through the House. As a protest against the inaction of local governments against lynching, the vote was admirable, but it does not offer a satisfactory solution of the problem. The bill will probably be stopped in the Senate despite the sizable majority vote for it in the House. Different rules, permitting filibusters, are one obstacle to its passage in the upper house; the greater proportionate strength of Southern Senators is another.

Indications are, however, that opposition to the bill in the Senate will not be determined entirely along sectional lines. Already Senator Borah, of Idaho, has declared against the proposal, describing it as "a legitimate descendant of those reconstruction measures which followed the Civil War." In addition, there is serious question as to its practicability. Every State has a law against lynching; the difficulty is that the law will not be applied by juries. It is doubtful whether citizens who will not indict or convict negligent officers and lynchers when sitting on a State panel would act far differently when serving on a Federal jury.

The bill is open to further criticism for the fact that it considers only lynchings in which the victims are taken from legal custody; in many cases mobs have moved against persons accused solely by rumor. A final and highly persuasive argument against the Gavagan bill is its uncertain constitutionality. Among other provisions, it would make a county in which a lynching occurs liable for damages to the victim's family, collectible in a Federal court. So dubious is the legality of this point that certain opponents of anti-lynching legislation are said to have voted for the bill, confident that it would be quickly annulled in its first court test.

Making Voters Tax-Conscious.

Treasury officials and members of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue are said to have provided the Administration with strong arguments in support of an economy campaign. Studies by these experts apparently led to the conclusion that the only major sources of new Federal revenue are higher levies on low incomes or a general sales tax. Probably that explains Senator Robinson's gloomy warning that "we have about exhausted the sources of taxation to which the Government is willing and able to resort."

Undeniably the Administration would be extremely reluctant for political reasons to recommend a general sales tax. Leaving out that remote possibility, there remains the proposal to increase taxes on income in the lower and middle brackets and to reduce the exemptions. That, too, would be a most unpopular measure. But it could be made to yield considerable revenue and it would have the great advantage of helping to make the public tax-conscious.

According to the latest official analysis, only 2,067,736 persons were subject to the Federal income tax on returns for 1935. Of that number, nearly 1,600,000 persons reporting net incomes under $5,000 paid an average tax of only $28. In short, fewer than 500,000 persons paid almost all the taxes collected on individual incomes.

The non-representative character of the tax is further emphasized by studies of the Brookings Institution which indicate that in 1929 over 90 per cent of all American families had incomes below $5,000 and 71 per cent incomes under $2,500. In that same year of comparative prosperity, it is estimated that there were as many families with incomes under $1,700 as with incomes above that amount.

It is plain, therefore, that we possess a reservoir of virtually untaxed income which can be reached by increasing normal tax rates and lowering present liberal exemptions. This is far from being a pleasant prospect in view of the limited resources of the great majority of our people. Moreover, the man of small means already pays onerous taxes to the Federal and State governments in all sorts of indirect ways. For example, innumerable excise taxes, customs duties, local sales taxes and property taxes are shifted in whole or in part to consumers in the form of higher prices for goods, increased rentals and sometimes deductions from wages.

It is very difficult, indeed impossible, to impress the public with the burdensomeness of these levies so long as they are collected from a relatively few individuals. But when the man of small means is compelled to pay a certain percentage of his income directly to the tax collector he immediately acquires a sobering realization of the folly of extravagant governmental spending. For that reason, quite apart from the question of revenue, democratization of the income tax has long been urged by tax reformers.

At a time when excessive spending threatens to undermine the country's financial foundations, it is particularly necessary to make people with limited incomes realize that in one way or another they must pay for government outlays. The best way to drive that elementary lesson home is to give the average man a taste of direct income taxation.

Ready To Function.

More than nine months after passage of the merchant marine act of 1936 the members of the permanent Maritime Commission established under that law have at last been confirmed by the Senate. Criticism of the prolonged delay in setting up this important agency is tempered by the knowledge that the appointees have been selected with care and are exceptionally well qualified for their arduous duties.

Apart from immediately pressing tasks, such as the award of contracts for a new liner and adjustment of ocean mail contracts, the commission is confronted by long-range problems of great scope and variety. Among its duties will be that of surveying trade routes and determining the size, character and speed of ships required on those routes. The next step will call for construction of the needed vessels to be either sold or chartered to private shipping companies.

Problems relating to personnel such as establishment of minimum wages and assurance of decent working conditions on subsidized vessels are also of outstanding importance. Indeed, the chief justification of the subsidies authorized by this measure lies in the fact that American shipping is competitively handicapped by the relatively high labor costs prevailing in our shipyards and the high wages paid our seamen. To maintain and improve American standards, the commission must take care that the subsidies are used for the purpose for which they are intended.

These and other duties, notably the strengthening of our naval defenses through the creation of an auxiliary to the battle fleet, call for sound judgment, firm administrative handling and expert knowledge. The new Maritime Commission has been given a mandate to rescue the American merchant marine from the state of demoralization into which it has been plunged by conditions largely beyond its control. There is every reason to believe that under its guidance rapid progress toward rehabilitation of American shipping will be made.

Corporate Feudalism.

Tales of feudalism and lawlessness coming out of the investigation conducted by the Senate Civil Liberties Committee go a long way toward explaining the bitterness behind some of the labor disputes from which the country is now suffering. Where independent unionism is crushed by terroristic practices and the corruption of law-enforcement officers, outbursts of violence are to be expected.

It would be a mistake to assume that the "killings, kidnapings, maiming, dynamiting and terrorism" of Harlan County are typical of industrial relations in the entire country. This section of Kentucky is notorious for its lawlessness. Shooting and dynamiting seem to be the common method of settling disputes there. From the testimony before the Senate committee, however, it is evident that the attitude of some Harlan coal operators is in large part responsible for the social deficiencies of this area.

The story of Sheriff Middleton's $2,400 profits in a single year from an investment of only $2,500 in a company store is especially revealing. The company store and the use of script instead of cash for the payment of wages are common ways of mulcting employes. In isolated communities where the company owns all the living quarters as well as the stores, employes are completely at the mercy of feudal employers. Victimization of this character, though exceptional, has greatly helped to bring the whole idea of company unionism into disrepute.

When deputy sheriffs use money from the coal operators for hiring thugs and spies to crush union activities and bolster this shameless exploitation, the limit of human endurance is reached. In this case a cleaning up of corrupt public officials seems to be as urgent as the abolition of corporate feudalism. Kentucky may well be chagrined over the washing of her dirty linen in the National Capital. It is to be hoped that feeling of shame will stimulate the Frankfort authorities to action.

American industry as a whole cannot be judged by what takes place in Harlan County. But Senator La Follette's committee has brought forth sufficient evidence to show that espionage, intimidation of workers and lawless interference with collective bargaining are customary practices. It is time for that dark chapter in the history of American industrial relations to be terminated. Fortunately the National Labor Relations Board may now intervene, with full assurance of support in the courts, to protect the rights of working men against such atrocious abuses.

The Marijuana Menace.

A decade ago the name of marijuana was unknown to the overwhelming majority of the American people except, possibly, in its Oriental equivalent of hasheesh. Only narcotic experts knew of the degenerating effect of the drug on the human system. At that time the marijuana problem was not serious so far as the United States was concerned, although the Geneva convention had already recognized it as one of international importance.

But marijuana is a serious problem for the United States now. During the past decade, and increasingly during the past five years, the cultivation of the plant, which can be grown almost anywhere, has spread by leaps and bounds. Addiction not only among adults but also among children has greatly increased.

One State after another has been impelled to put anti-marijuana laws on the statute books until, the other day, the list became complete.

The Treasury Department now proposes to add to these State laws a Federal law curbing marijuana by means of the taxing power and thus placing it in the same category with other narcotics as a subject of regulatory action. Even without this law the Federal Narcotics Bureau has been cooperating with State and municipal authorities in attacking the evil. Last year, partly as a result of this joint effort, State authorities made 338 seizures and destroyed 200 tons of marijuana.

With a Federal law on the books a more ambitious attack can be launched. It is time to wipe out the evil before its potentialities for national degeneracy become more apparent. The legislation just introduced in Congress by Representative Doughton would further this end. Its speedy passage is desirable.

Federal Control Of Airlines.

From the Louisville Courier-Journal.

Nothing could be more timely than unified Federal control over commercial aviation. There have been six major crashes of airlines since December 15, with a total fatality list of 56. Investigations are conducted, but little is done to insure safety. Usually the Department of Commerce is blamed for the failure of its radio beam or the service it gives to commercial lines, but those lines are not required to install expensive equipment that would minimize the hazards of flying. Every accident is followed by some kind of buck passing, to the end that more lives are lost and air transportation suffers.

Because of its hazards air transportation should be subjected to even a stricter regulation than railroads and buses. The Interstate Commerce Commission is the logical agency for this protection of the air lines as well as the public.

District Barber Bills.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There are two similar bills before Congress that flagrantly violate the first amendment to the Federal Constitution, which forbids Congress to make any law looking toward the establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise of the conscience in religious matters.

Bills S. 1270 and H. R. 3291 are "to regulate barbers in the District of Columbia, and for other purposes." The offending section of these bills in section 14 (a) (6) which states, "It shall be unlawful to maintain or operate any establishment in the District of Columbia wherein the occupation or trade of barbering is conducted on Sunday, except that the foregoing provisions of this paragraph shall not apply to persons who actually refrain from the practice of such occupation or trade on Saturday solely because of religious beliefs."

These proposed bills compel barbers to observe "Sunday" or "Saturday" solely because of religious beliefs. Such legislation is purely religious and is in violation of the Constitution.

A law requiring barbers to rest one day in seven has been in force for the last four years, and the police department states that it has worked admirably. They say that every barber selects his own day of rest, and registers the same with the health department of the District of Columbia, and so far no one has had to be arrested for the violation of this one day in seven rest law. This law is concerned with health principles, not religious principles. However, the proposed bills that would supersede the present law betray the religious motive when they say that the rest day must be observed "solely because of religious beliefs."

More On The Jefferson Memorial Plans

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: King Concrete seems destined to continue its commercial reign over Washington, if our iron-headed rulers have their way and are permitted to destroy the hundreds of Japanese cherry trees that beautify the Tidal Basin.

Not so long ago, the politicians decided the parks should have their "faces lifted." As a result, flower beds, which had gladdened the hearts of nature lovers for generations, were removed; lilac bushes uprooted and peaceful paths supplanted with asphalt avenues, unsightly and altogether unnecessary.

It was Thoreau who said: "I love Nature because she is not a man but a retreat from him. None of his institutions control, or, pervade her. . . . He makes me wish for another world; she makes me content with this."

Politicians, please take notice!

GOLDSBOROUGH.
Washington, April 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If "Franklin D." does cut down the cherry trees with his little hatchet, will he deny doing it, or will he tell his mother the truth?

ZACK SPRATT.
Washington, April 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I had rather have the trees than the memorial. So had Joyce Kilmer. And Thomas Jefferson.

It is unthinkable that we could commit the sacrilege of destroying living beauty to replace it with a mausoleum.

What about a revolving fund that would permit a number of young men to have an education at the University of Virginia thereby becoming a part of one of Jefferson's dreams-come-true?

That would at least be a living memorial. And one that I believe would please Jefferson himself.

JOSEPHINE C. McCORMACK.
Washington, April 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Thomas Jefferson was of all things a practical man. It seems to me, therefore, that a new Highway Bridge would be the type of memorial he would appreciate. The present structure is anything but worthy of its setting. Such a bridge would link Jefferson's native State of Virginia with the District of Columbia.

It was owing to Jefferson's deal with Hamilton that this site was selected for the Federal City.

The South was against Hamilton's debt assumption plan by the new Federal Government, and the North wanted the Federal City. This deal was one of the most famous in our history—the South was given the Federal City, and enough votes were gained to carry through the debt assumption. Jefferson and Hamilton worked together at that time. As there is to be a Jefferson Memorial it would seem fitting not to overlook his part at least in founding this city here.

The present approach to the Highway Bridge is poorly planned. This condition could be remedied and some plan for an "Independence Circle," with perhaps a statue if considered appropriate, could be worked out.

But spare us the useless temple of Jefferson by the banks of the basin.

INTERESTED RESIDENT.
Washington, April 13.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With apologies to Joyce Kilmer, I submit a poem entitled "Farewell to Cherry Blossoms:"

I know that I shall never see
A shrine as lovely as a tree
A tree, that with each spring does wear,
Such lovely blossoms in her hair.
A tree that knows God's smile each day,
And lifts her loveliness to pray,
A tree whose beauty is for all,
Shall stone and mortar cause its fall?
Fair tree, who mere men now decree
Its beauty shall no longer be
A shrine is built by fools like these.
But God on High, gave earth its trees.

THE LOWLY POET.
Washington, April 12.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been a great deal of discussion about the Jefferson Memorial, but regardless of the position or what it is to be like what I can not understand is why the Government will pay an architect thousands of dollars to go to Europe to copy the design of a building for reproduction here. Have not our architects genius enough to produce something that the coming generations will look back upon and say that this was the product of the twentieth century or must we say that all genius died with the Greeks

When opportunity presents itself you would think they would be glad to produce something outstanding and original, instead of making copies of something now in existence.

Must it be columns and domes?

D. N. K.
Washington, April 15.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The breathtaking beauty of the Tidal Basin must not be marred by any change whatsoever.

The spiritual beauty of the scene affects the visitors from far and near as does the exquisite structure of the Taj Mahal. It is almost too ethereal to be borne. It is as inspiring as the Grand Canyon, and as complete. Any change would spoil it.

We need to get away from man-made piles of sticks and stones, and rest our eyes, revive our spirits by gazing upon a sight of such ineffable beauty as we have in the Tidal Basin at this season. It is a fitting relief to the massive government buildings of the city.

Jefferson, himself a lover of nature, would be the strongest opponent of such money-making desecration $3,000,000! That money is needed for relief. Do we pay taxes to enrich those men? No?

The pupils of 7B of Paul Junior High School would like more of your very interesting articles concerning the cherry blossoms.

Symphony Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The National Symphony Orchestra returned last Sunday from a concert tour of the South. When the orchestra played last Sautrday night at Greensboro, N. C., it was the concluding concert of the season during which the orchestra visited 30 cities from New England to Florida. The audiences in these cities have been unusually enthusiastic this year and the chairmen of the local committees have repeatedly expressed their thanks to the public of Washington who had made possible this National Symphony Orchestra and thus providing so much inspiration and happiness to people of these cities.

Now that the season is over, I want to take this means of thanking The Post for its most important part in the support of an institution that has done so much to build Washington's reputation as a cultural center. I realize, of course, that in helping this activity that you are following your fixed policy of assisting any project that contributes to Washington's well being, but I want you to know that your efforts are being appreciated not only locally, but in the country at large.

Employe Nomination.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Now that the minimum wage commission is to be re-established in the District of Columbia, may I suggest the name of Charles E. Sands as employe's representative, the gentleman who rendered such valuable service as the labor advisor on the hotel and restaurant codes.

When it is taken into consideration that the hotel and restaurant industry is the largest in the District—that more people are employed in that industry and come under the decisions of the minimum wage commission—and the vast amount of experience he obtained while serving on the hotel and restaurant codes, his name becomes a logical suggestion.

Latest Lynchings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Dixie's cultural background has again made the front page. Two defenseless Negroes have again been tried and found guilty a la "Southern Style" (i. e.), mob rule versus law and order. It is refreshing to note, however, that their technique has been modernized in that a blow torch was used for braising the aforesaid victims prior to the grand finale.

How long will the rest of civilized America permit these orgies to thwart the Constitutional rights of citizens?

It is hoped, however, that the timeliness of the act, coincidental as it is with the Congressional hearings on the proposed anti-lynching bill, will have a favorable effect in bringing about remedial legislation.

The Post Impressionist

"Gramp."

I REMEMBER him as a medium-sized man, with great breadth of shoulders, blue eyes, a white moustache and goatee, a black skullcap covering a bald spot. When in the house, he wore a clean, gray sweater, and would sit in his big leather chair and count the automobiles that sped past our door on Washington boulevard. It was still possible to count them in 1913.

"Gramp," as we children called him, was the master of his house. It took him a long while to get upstairs to his room and he didn't eat as he had in the days when his blacksmith shop stood where today's glittering Palmer House extends hospitality to travelers of the world. But no one "sassed him back" and his children never crossed him—openly. He did his best to flip street cars at the age of 80. And when he sat at table, eating eggs on Friday, he'd say (since he was fond of meat): "Wouldn't it be terrible if the other fellows were right and it isn't necessary to miss meat on Friday?"

It was Gramp who gave me my first love of history. Barely six at the time, I would sit on a stool before the skull-capped figure in the big leather chair and listen to him tell of his Civil War adventures. A member of the famous Irish regiment known as Mulligan's Guards, he had left Chicago early in the fighting around Missouri and was captured when the gallant Col. Mulligan fell, with his last words echoing in Gramp's ears: "Wrap the flag around me, boys." Paroled home, Gramp re-enlisted and was sent down to Virginia when "Little Mac" was making his futile gestures in the Peninsular Campaign.

Gramp had been in love with a girl, and the girl thought she should be in a convent. Just before leaving for Missouri battlefields, the brawny Irishman dropped in at old St. Patrick's and had a talk with the pastor. When the story was told, the pastor said: "Ed, if I were you, I'd marry the girl." And Ed did just that. Their first baby was born while Gramp was away at war, and she lived to teach for 50 years in the Chicago schools, her name a byword for kindliness, charity and good teaching.

When the war ended, Gramp came back and his smithy boomed. The police and fire departments, Fortune's and other great breweries, every big concern that used those huge horses of another day, sent them to "Murray's shop." A baseball fan till the day he died, Gramp used to work against time, shoeing mightily so that he could get down to the lakefront to see Anson's Colts smash the visiting team to smithereens. And men of those days used to tell of a fellow who called Gramp a bad name. The shop was three steps down from the sidewalk, but the fellow landed in the streets. Gramp was not a Tipperrary man for nothing!

The only time (and the folks kidded him gently about it) that he ever came home in a patrol wagon, was the night of the Haymarket Riot, most famous American radical outburst of the latter nineteenth century. He knew several of the policemen killed by the anarchist bomb.

* * * *

Ah, yes, he told me about history; and about the Leprachaun and the Pookah and the banshees and the night the ghost chased him home. (That was the night, he admitted, that he had his first smoke.) He told of Father Matthew, probably the greatest temperance preacher the world has know, and how he (Gramp) as a little boy, thought he "took the pledge" by kissing the stone wall in his Irish garden! I recall, with some shivers, his account of the punishment his mother used to inflict—making him get into bed, sans clothes, with a bunch of nettles. With good reason do we have the expression in English—"nettled!"

In the opening doys of the war, he followed the news with interest, my uncle reading to him every single word covering the titanic battles that were shaking Europe and the world. Liege and Brussels and Yser meant little to me in those days; but boning over modern history tests, the memory of the broad-shouldered old man in the skullcap used to come back and I'd say: "I wish Gramp had lived to see these times." And I remembered well his habit of keeping candy, passed around on the "family Sundays," in his humidor. He would present it to the children on Monday or Tuesday, we being glad to get it, despite the strong tobacco flavor which clung to the chocolate.

* * * *

Without the wailing of banshees, his time came, one cold night in December, 1915. Below, in the parlor, a record was being played, an "Ave Maria," sung softly by I forget what star. Gramp stirred on his pillow, opened his eyes, asked: 'Is It Helen?" She was his favorite granddaughter. I saw him a few minutes later, still, quiet, at peace. He didn't want any G. A. R. squad to fire a volley over his grave; but he does rest in Calvary Cemetery, not very far from the monument which tops the grave of George Mulligan, who died when Gramp was a very young man.

And strangely, I remember he used only to chuckle and never to reprimand when I corrected him in the midst of a Civil War story in which he spoke of the "rebels." "Not the rebels, Gramp, the British." I'd say in my ignorance. And wouldn't he be glad now to see the British out of Ireland.

Florida Weaves A Web.

Miami.

SOME FAMOUS European bughunter, who spent years peering into the private life of the fishworm, the beetle and the picnic ant, once wrote a piece about the treacherous guile of the trapdoor spider, which weaves a horn-shaped web so beautiful that other little insects are enticed to nestle in.

But once they enter just so far they trip a little trigger and the trapdoor drops behind them, whereat the spider does his dirty work. It is a scene on which I would draw a curtain but for a sad reality on the pleasure coast of Florida, "where every prospect pleases and only man is vile."

In 1925 the people of Florida, by solemn referendum, adopted a constitutional amendment forbidding the imposition of a State income tax. This week 38 members of the Lower House of the State Legislature in Tallahassee proposed a new amendment to permit such a tax. The proposition will not pass this year, but the evil seed has been planted in the minds of the turpentine counties who outvote the delegates from the rouette and champagne sector.

And imagination falters and reason totters at the thought of what the horny-handed, year-around working men of Florida would do in a State referendum on this vicious invitation to sock the idle rich and share the wealth.

* * * *

THE PURPOSE of the original amendment was to lure to Florida a great element of rich men and women from other States which levied or might some time decide to levy an income tax. This immunity and the absence of any actual State tax on the estates of deceased citizens have been the strongest selling points in the bright ballyhoo of the real estate salesman, the house builder and the municipal press agent.

It was not that the people of Florida had any personal love for the rich. They include too many preposterous bores and rum-pots of all ages and both sexes, who sit by the sea at night sipping wine and resenting the impudence of the working classes and think it folly to spoil the lazy rascals with a living wage or any tip above a dime.

The people of Florida wove their pretty web to lure these fortunes, and the result has been rich beyond the dreams of those who set the trap.

For hundreds of miles along the trophical avenues the marshmallow homes of the imported rich now present a scene of beauty without equal in the world. The French and Italian Rivieras are Coney Island by comparison with the loveliness of Palm Beach and certain portions of Miami Beach, and though the great mansions and candy cottages cost many million dollars, still the rich could reckon on a profit in the long run.

* * * *

They can establish residence in Florida by voting now and again, and if they be residents they enjoy, in addition to State income tax immunity and freedom from State death taxes, a tax rebate on $5,000 of the assessed valuation of their homes.

* * * *

THE SAVING to a New York millionaire on State income tax alone is such that in a few years he gets his home for nothing, and the saving to a rich man's family on his death has been a strong inducement to other retired economic royalists, even though they bear no State income tax at home.

All in all, a rich man has been able to show himself in simple arithmetic on paper that if he sold out and made his base in Florida the saving in taxes in time would equal and perhaps far exceed the cost of a pretty abode with access to the beach and sea and golf outside the door—and perhaps a distant nod from a Widener or even a Stotesbury.

But now the earth trembles with premonitions of tragedy. The real estate agents positively promised that there could never be a State income tax or a State death tax, because these guarantees were imbedded in the solemn constitution and the people's word was pledged.

But the real estate agents are not the Legislature. The Legislature is largely composed of rough guys of backwoods pioneer stock who do not admire millionaires in white pants. The majority of the voters are working types who haven't been able to rub off much of the richness of the rich by doing their washing or mending their sinks.

Any law these people passed these people can repeal.

It is a sad case, my friends, for it looks so soft and downy in this web, and yet that trapdoor trembles on a hair-trigger latch.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips

Is the Circus an Economic Waste?

"I can't enjoy the circus any more," complained Elmer Twitchell sadly today. "I thought the day would never come when the big show wouldn't bring me a thrill, but I've found that a visit to it is ruined by worries over the state of the Nation. I can't even enjoy the steam calliope without fretting over whether the fellow who plays it will go on a sit-down strike before he finishes.

* * * *

"I used to like to feed peanuts to the elephants, but now my little boy tugs at my sleeve and chirps: 'Papa, ain't that what they call economic waste?'

* * * *

"I took the kids to see the circus at Madison Square Garden and they all wanted to know if peanuts couldn't be put to a better use, and my little girl, Sarah—she's only 10—asked if I thought elephants justified themselves in the modern scheme of things.

* * * *

"We passed on to the giraffes and whereas I used to be spellbound by one of these critters I found myself asking whether they weren't a symbol of clumsy, old-fashioned methods. Why must giraffes be so awkward? Just because of custom and tradition. A little intelligent planning and a more utilitarian model could have been produced long ago!

* * * *

"And take monkeys! They didn't amuse me this year. No efficiency! No order! Monkeys represent all the outmoded theories of life. They even search for their own fleas in a day when they could demand scratching by a Federal bureau.

* * * *

"My little boy, Ignatz, looked at those monks flying around carefree and happy and having the time of their lives with no regulation whatever, and what do you think he said? He said very sternly: 'This thing should be investigated by a commission, daddy.'

* * * *

"The lions and tigers didn't appeal to me or the kids either this year. The children kept saying, 'Why don't they assert themselves? Why don't they band together and demand their rights?' And Sarah even glared at the lion trainer and called him an exploiter of defenseless wild animals! That girl reads too much.

* * * *

"And the pink lemonade! How I used to enjoy that! But under the questionings of the kids I kept thinking of the percentage of lemon and whether the red lemonade concessionaire was making an excessive profit."

* * * *

"Surely, the aerial performers thrilled you and the kids as of old, Mr. Twitchell?" put in a reporter.

"Nope," said Elmer drearily. "All I could think of this year was what the standard trapeze performer's wage was, whether he belonged to the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O., and what would happen if Lewis called a sit-down strike while a trapeze artist was in mid-air between two trapezes!"

Spring Was Game.

Winter were gone,
Spring are here—
It happens that way
Every year.

The grass has growed,
Through vernal thaws,
More greener than
It used to was.

So leave us lift
Our voice and sing,
Like we was glad
That it are spring!

The World Textile Conference

International Assembly Plots Program For June Meeting.

By Smith Simpson.

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE WORLD Textile Conference comes to an end this morning. As a technical and preparatory conference, it was designed to separate and clarify the issues involved in a broad attack upon employment problems in the textile industry. Specific measures will be drafted in time by the governing body of the International Labor Organization and adopted at sessions of the International Labor Conference scheduled for Geneva in June. The World Textile Conference was designed as the first stage in a process which will require months of development. No rush job is contemplated by the I. L. O.

What were the issues separated by the conference? They can be expressed in the following questions:

Should governments be called upon to furnish more complete statistics on conditions in the textile industry?

Should measures be undertaken internationally to increase the consumption of textiles?

Should tariffs be reduced? If so, in reducing tariffs should governments discriminate in their reductions so as to compel backward countries to improve their labor standards?

Should existing international organization be improved so as to deal effectively with the problems of the textile industry?

Should collective bargaining be encouraged in the textile industry?

Should collective bargaining in the textile industry be supplemented by legislation?

Should a world-wide reduction of hours be sought in the textile industry?

Should night work by women and young persons in the industry be prohibited?

Should the stretch-out be controlled?

Should a minimum age be fixed by law for the admission of young persons to employment?

Should extraterritoriality in China be modified so as to permit the application of Chinese labor legislation to foreign-owned factories in the International Settlement in China?

I. L. O.'s "White Report" Broad Analysis Of Industry.

THE MOST comprehensive study of the textile industry ever made was laid before the textile conference by the permanent staff of the International Labor Organization. This is known as the "White Report." However, the permanent staff of the I. L. O. was obliged to admit that because of the size of the industry, its complexities, the intricate structure of its trade relations, the changes which the industry has undergone, and the many countries and climates involved, it was impossible for the report to cover all the questions presented by conditions existing in the industry. Furthermore, there were gaps in the information unavailable to the I. L. O.

Because of this, special attention was given at the conference to the improvement of statistics furnished to the I. L. O. by member governments. A committee on statistics was one of the three committees established, its chairman to be Carter Goodrich, the United States Commissioner of Labor in Geneva and the representative of the United States on the governing body of the I. L. O.

As a result of the report of this committee, the conference on Thursday recommended that three types of statistics be assembled by the International Labor Office: (1) quarterly statistics on employment, wages and hours in the textile industry; (2) more detailed statistics every five years on employment, equipment, wages, workers' and employers' contribution to compulsory social insurance schemes, and holidays; and (3) statistics on cost of production.

The most controversial of these recommendations was the last. Resisted by British employers, it was warmly supported by the entire delegations of certain countries as the United States and France; by the Canadian and Japanese governments, and by all the workers' delegates. Statistics on cost of production underlie much of the action which might be undertaken by the I. L. O. to equalize labor standards of the various textile-producing countries. Evidence of the importance which the I. L. O. itself attached to the collection of cost-of-production statistics was given by the attendance of the secretary general of the conference, Harold B. Butler, at the meetings of the sub-committee of the statistical committee which dealt with this subject.

Proposals To Increase Textile Consumption Urged.

VARIOUS PROPOSALS for the increase of consumption of textiles were made at the conference. That the economic problems of the industry call for international action was a point upon which all speakers agreed. Figures were submitted by the United States illustrating the fact that consumption of textile goods among low income industrial workers in the United States expands more rapidly than income. Family budget studies made by the Department of Labor were adduced which showed that as family incomes rise from $1,000 to $2,700 a year, the total dollar expenditures on clothing increase in some cities as much as seven-fold.

Delegates from India stated that the per capita consumption of textile products in India is at present only 16.4 yards per year, but that it would require several times as many yards a year for a man to be adequately clothed in that country. Statements along similar lines were advanced in respect to Poland, Mexico and other countries.

Among the suggestions incorporated in the report adopted by the conference on this subject were the reduction of tariff barriers, improvement in efficiency of production and in the quality of raw materials so as to reduce prices, the increase of purchasing power among the low-income groups through the establishment of minimum wage laws, and the creation of an international tripartite committee within the International Labor Organization to study further the conditions in the industry and measures needed for its rehabilitation and expansion.

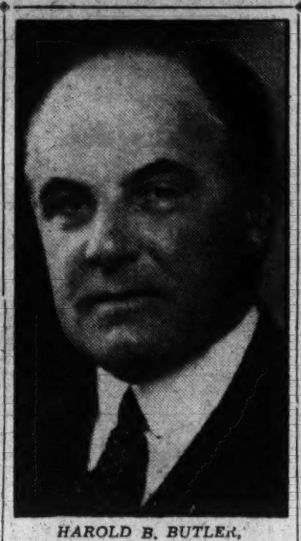
Complexity Of Industry Demands International Action.

OF ALL the suggestions of the conference, the last-mentioned suggestion was one of the most important. While the International Labor Organization is itself a permanent organization devoted to the raising of labor standards throughout the world, a concentration of attention on the textile industry is needed in view of its complexity, its rapid spread to agricultural regions, its regional variations, its dependence upon the purchasing power of the masses of the people, and the extent to which textiles figure in world trade and their production is thereby influenced by currency and commercial conditions.

Of primary interest concerning the proposed international textile committee is that it will be organized within the existing framework of the I. L. O. Since the I. L. O. is a permanent body itself, its permanence and experience should assure the committee of greater stability and continuity than is ordinarily available to such international groups. A few years ago an international sugar committee was formed by sugar producers, but it was short-lived. With the I. L. O. functioning day in and day out, the proposed textile committee should have an indefinite lease of life.

The second point in regard to the proposed committee is that it will deal not only with labor conditions in the industry but with the problems of textile producers. Indeed, if the discussions at the conference are an indication of the scope of the committee's activities, it will also undertake the broader task of studying the social effects of textile problems and the effects of general economic conditions on the textile industry. The committee might be viewed as the beginning of an international NRA for the textile industry.

Third significant aspect of the committee is its tripartite form. Several factors explain why the I. L. O. has been able to cope successfully with international labor problems in years after the World War when its sister institution, the League of Nations, has had serious difficulties. But it is doubtful if any single factor has played a more important part in the I. L. O.'s success than the representation of workers and employers together with governments. The form of organization on which the I. L. O. is based is economic rather than political, international rather than national. The workers and employers collaborate across national boundaries as though these did not exist. Tripartite representation on the textile committee will give the committee a force of character which a purely governmental committee would not have.



HAROLD B. BUTLER,
I. L. O. director and secretary-general of Textile Conference.

Social Aspects Command Attention Of Delegates.

RECOMMENDATIONS made by delegates to the conference have covered a wide variety of subjects related to the social aspects of the industry. Collective bargaining was recommended. Since collective agreements do not always offer adequate safeguards for effective regulation of working conditions, the enactment of legislation to supplement and to apply collective agreements was likewise recommended.

Reduction of hours was urged by many workers, employers and governments. The conference assembled information relating to the effects of reduction-of-hours programs in the United States and France which will be valuable in the future elaboration of a 40-hour week convention at the International Labor Conference. Prohibition of night work by women and young persons was recommended, and those countries which have not yet ratified international labor conventions dealing with night work will be urged to do so.

The conference has received proposals to regulate the stretch-out. Undoubtedly this subject will be discussed in detail by the governing body of the I. L. O. at its meeting next month. Attention was focused by the conference on the effort now being made in Geneva to increase the age limitation in the I. L. O.'s child labor conventions from 14 to 15.

The report of the conference's committee on social problems of the textile industry stated:

"It is desirable that a minimum age should be fixed by law in all countries for the admission of young persons to employment in the industry. In this connection the attention of governments might usefully be invited to the desirability of giving consideration to the ratification of the minimum age (industry) convention, 1919, and of any revised convention on this subject which may be adopted by the International Labor Conference in June next."

This report is expected to be approved by the conference this morning.

Groundwork Mapped Out For Geneva Labor Office.

THE SIGNIFICANCE of the conference lies not so much in the conference itself as in the International Labor Office. The conference was designed to be a preparation for more concentrated action in the textile industry by the International Labor Office. When Albert Thomas, its first director, set the tradition of initiative and leadership in matters of international labor he made the organization something more than an administration body. While the International Labor Office is the permanent staff of the I. L. O. and has many times been compared with national civil services, it is more than an international civil service. It performs a necessary and valuable administrative function. But it performs an even more necessary and valuable function of initiative. It leads rather than waits on national governments.

In emphasizing the dependence of the textile industry upon world-wide purchasing power, and the dependence of labor standards in this industry upon the variety of economic, financial and commercial policies of nations which affect such purchasing power, the conference has undoubtedly embarked the I. L. O. upon a wider field of action than it has heretofore essayed. The I. L. O. was a post-war experiment. It has deliberately limited the range of its experimentation to labor questions. It has drafted, and countries have ratified, nearly 60 conventions on labor subjects. With the growing interdependence of the world, labor conditions have become more susceptible to changes in world economic conditions, to currency fluctuations, to price changes and to a host of other factors.

By singling out the textile industry for a conference, the I. L. O. gives evidence of its recognition of the need of regulating conditions which determine labor standards as well as setting up labor standards themselves. It is quite possible that the traditional approach of the I. L. O. to labor questions may therefore be changed in two ways: (1) The I. L. O. will seek to arrange international agreements not only upon hours of work, child labor, etc., but also conditions which operate across national frontiers to cause excessive hours, low wages, child labor, woman labor, night work, etc., and (2) the I. L. O. may possibly seek to develop conventions relating to specific industries rather than to industry as a whole, as it has often done in the past. That is, it is conceivable that the conference now ending may be a point of departure for a convention on collective bargaining in the textile industry rather than a convention on collective bargaining to cover all industrial workers.

For these reasons the conference has more than a passing significance and its effects will be worth watching in the months to come.

National Honor

By Barnet Nover

Imperialist Pacifism.

THAT STORMY debate in the House of Commons Wednesday on British policy in the Bilbao situation was extraordinary in more ways than one.

It is a strange phenomenon, indeed, to see the nation that destroyed the Armada, whipped Napoleon and kept the German fleet bottled up during most of the World War running to cover in the face of threats by a Spanish puppet. But it is certainly not less strange to see erstwhile pacifists leading the attack on this policy of cool moderation.

In this debate both sides were distinctly out of character. The Baldwin government is at the moment determined to pursue a policy of peace at any price. If such a course is gall and wormwood to British Tories they did not show it. They swallowed the bitter potion manfully.

Their fellow Tories had applauded Disraeli's saber-rattling Guildhall speech in 1877 when the British premier threw down the gage of battle to the Russians. On countless other occasions Tories had shouted, "Hear, hear," in response to spread-eagle utterances proclaiming Britain's might and its readiness to use it in defense of its "national honor" and its sacred interests.

On Wednesday the Tories cheered Baldwin, Sir John Simon and Anthony Eden when these cabinet members defended the government's decision not to break the rebel blockade of Bilbao because Gen. Franco had said this must not be done. It was a spectacle to cause Lord Nelson to climb from his perch in Trafalgar Square and Wellington to turn in his grave.

* * * *

AND WHO, on the other hand, urged Great Britain to defend its national honor? Messrs. Attlee, Wedgwood, Maxton—gentlemen who until recently have preached pacifism in more or less undiluted form.

To make the spectacle complete all that was needed was to have old George Lansbury get up and urge a declaration of war against Franco and his wire-pullers. But perhaps Lansbury is too old, and set in his ways, to change his life-long pacifism so quickly.

Consistency is, as Senator Ashurst has so often been telling us, no jewel. Indeed, as pointed out in this column Thursday, the British government is in a position to claim that its policy with regard to the Bilbao affair is of a piece with its policy concerning the Spanish civil war since the beginning. Moreover, as the placatory Italian attitude indicates, the absence of bluster does not mean an absence of influence.

Messrs. Attlee, Wedgwood, Maxton, et al, are also, in their own way, consistent. As they see it, the greatest danger to the peace of Europe today lies in the circumstance that Great Britain hesitates to use her power, with the result that the aggressive Fascist nations tend to think they are permitted a free hand. They can say with The Round Table:

The weakness of British foreign policy is not due to a false choice between one set of risks and another. It is due to the apparent failure to see the risks until it is too late, until humiliation is the only escape from the consequences of sticking to our guns.

* * * *

IT IS SIGNIFICANT, however, that the parties in Great Britain have changed sides. The Conservatives, for long associated with jingoism, with prestige politics, with a readiness to swing the big stick, is now all for caution even at the risk of enduring insults. On the other hand the Labor party, which had for years emblazoned peace on its banners, with one of its factions vehemently nonresistent, is at this juncture showing a belligerent streak. They are now the patriots, willing to risk a war to uphold national pride.

Nor is this paradoxical switch in attitudes confined to Great Britain. It is to be encountered all over the map, in every land where thought and expression have not been co-ordinated into a dead level of uniformity by a totalitarian regime. The Spanish crisis has only emphasized a tendency in existence for some time.

It is doubtful whether the British Liberals and Laborites would have been so insistent on using Britain's might to send ships into Bilbao were Bilbao in rebel hands with the loyalists blockading it. Under such circumstances it is quite possible that it would be the government's supporters, if not the government itself, that would favor full protection for British shipping.

* * * *

THESE ARE kaleidoscopic times. Great Britain, France, the United States are democracies. But within each of them there are elements that while rendering lip service to this ideal think of it only in terms of the past rather than of the future. There are possibilities in democracy which these elements view with unquestioned alarm.

To many an Englishman Spanish democracy is not democratic because it is manifesting itself in un-British ways. Many Americans feel the same. In recent months their sympathies for Gen. Franco has unquestionably waned, first because he has not been very successful and, secondly, because he has been so much of a puppet in the hands of Mussolini and Hitler. But the British imperialists have no desire to drag their country into a war to save the skins of either side in Spain.

The Dauphin

By William Lyon Phelps

Or Mr. Ney.

I see another book has just appeared, supporting the theory that Marshal Ney was not killed by a firing squad, but that he escaped to America and lived here for many years. Books on this subject have appeared before and will appear at irregular intervals in the future.

But here is something totally new and unexpected and excitingly romantic, and inclosed in so small a book that one can read it all through in an hour.

* * * *

This slender volume is called "I Who Should Command All," is written by a member of the Audubon family, Mrs. Alice Jaynes Tyler, of New Haven, and is published in honor of the opening of the Audubon Memorial Park and Museum, at Henderson, Ky. It is published by the Framamat Publishing Co., New Haven, Conn. It is copiously illustrated, and the illustrations are exceedingly important, considering the main thesis of the book.

It also appears at an opportune time, following shortly after a lengthy biography of the great Audubon.

Louis XVII, the Dauphin, the infant son of Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette, who, although it has been believed that he perished at Paris, as it is certain that his parents were executed, is thought by many persons to have escaped from prison.

I give no opinion as to the proofs or the historical probabilities of this new presentation of facts, but I will say that it is as interesting as a romance ought to be, and that I think every one who reads it will find it so.

Tattooed Ladies.

One out of every five men and one out of every 15 women in the United States is, or has been, tattooed. Currently, tattooing is on the rise. According to specialists in the field, it is a true barometer of good times, for most of their patrons look upon it as a luxury, not to be indulged in when money is scarce.

Years marked by wars and important events, such as world fairs and coronations, are peak years for tattooing. London tattooists now have more business than they can fill. Those tattooed frequently change their minds, as one-third of the income of tattooers comes from removing designs that have been applied while the subject was in a state of devil-may-care.

pation may likewise be a proper object for an excise tax."

Davis, who brought the court action, sought to restrain the Boston & Maine Railroad from paying the unemployment insurance tax, and the Edison Electric Illuminating Co., of Boston, from paying the old-age benefit taxes. The Circuit Court reversed findings of District Judge George C. Sweeney, former Assistant Attorney General, who was appointed to the bench by President Roosevelt. He had upheld the act.

The Government's budget position might be considerably affected by injunctions, granted by district courts under yesterday's rulings, to block collection of the social security taxes.

The daily Treasury statement of April 13 showed that taxes collected under the act so far in April had totaled $61,228,209.77, with the total for the fiscal year, though collection did not start until January 1, at $124,496,582.39. The collection has been gaining momentum rapidly.

Loss of any of this revenue, which goes into the general fund of the Treasury, would follow closely on the loss of some $100,000,000 of taxes collected under the railroad retirement act. A substitute bill offered Thursday by Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee, provides that most of this money, paid under the old act which was fought in the courts by the carriers, shall be returned to the roads and the employes.

27,000,000 Involved.

Altmeyer, Security Board chairman, pointed out that the old-age benefit clauses, section 8, are the only part of the act operated wholly on a Federal basis, State co-operation being involved in the unemployment insurance. The old-age benefit taxes are calculated to provide an amount roughly equivalent to the cost of the pension system set up in the act, under which benefits are now accruing for some 27,000,000 workers.

The Boston and Maine case challenge of the unemployment insurance provisions, section 9 of the act, he said, "involves the Federal-State system of unemployment compensation under which more than 18,000,000 workers in 48 States are now accumulating credits which will provide substantial benefits for periods up to 20 weeks in the event of their unemployment a year or two hence or thereafter."

Neither the Boston cases nor any other litigation pending, he said, affect the public assistance provisions of the act under which the Federal Government assists States in providing aid to more than 1,500,000 aged, needy blind and needy dependent children."

Toronto May Give Castle to Dionnes To Attract Tourists

Toronto, April 16 (AP) (Canadian Press).—A grandiose plan to enshrine the Dionne quintuplets in the $2,000,000 Casa Loma "white elephant" castle and—as its sponsor said—"pay off the entire national debt in 20 years" was under consideration today by the Toronto Civic Property Committee.

The children would be made "Canada's greatest tourist attraction" under the scheme of Alderman Percy Quinn, who was named a committee of one to place the plan before the property commissioner.

The plan would place the quintuplets amid the regal splendor of the castle, built by Sir Henry Pellatt, which Toronto seized for unpaid taxes. They would reside there eight months of the year.

Text Excerpts

By the Associated Press.

Boston, April 16.—Highlights of the majority opinion of the circuit court's opinions were:

The important issues, we think, are whether the tax imposed (under the unemployment insurance provision) can be termed an excise tax; and whether the Federal Government * * * seeks indirectly to control State action in matter resting solely within the powers reserved to the States under Amendment 10 of the Constitution.

* * * *

It is said that a State is not obliged to pass an unemployment act, and many States have not done so. Neither were employers obliged to comply with the child labor law—they could have paid the tax or penalty—or farmers to reduce their acreage in accordance with the provisions of the agricultural adjustment act—they could have refused the aid—but the consequences of failure to do so were such that they could not afford to do otherwise.

* * * *

So in this case, if a State does not pass an unemployment compensation act complying with the requirement of Congress, or of the proper Federal bureau, the entire tax assessed on employes (under the unemployment insurance provision) goes into the United States Treasury. Such a State must itself bear whatever financial burdens result to it from unemployment in its industries. No payments for unemployment assistance are made from the Federal Treasury. A State may not comply at once, but if the act is held valid the disadvantages resulting to the State and its employers and the consequent dissatisfaction of its employes, it is quite obvious, will sooner or later compel all the States to enact such legislation * * *.

* * * *

That this amounts to coercion of the States and control by Congress of a matter clearly within the province of the States cannot be denied.

* * * *

* * * The issue is not what powers Congress ought to have to meet conditions as viewed by the executive and legislative branches of the Government, but what powers are vested in Congress under the Constitution. The Supreme Court through a long series of opinions has defined those powers and the limitations upon them. If the Constitution, as construed through the year's, requires amendments to meet new conditions, the way is provided therein.

* * * *

Excerpts from the dissenting opinion follow:

While the power of Congress to select the occasion or object of the tax and the method of measurement is discretionary, its power to select the subjects of taxation are apparently limited by the Constitution. Under its requirements Congress cannot select as the subject of taxation the activities of a State, or its instrumentalities, of a governmental nature, but unquestionably has the right to select the business of an individual or a firm, or a corporate organization.

* * * *

The child labor tax case and kindred cases are a far cry from the one now before us. The tax here in question is certainly an excise; * * * the tax is levied to provide general revenue to defray the expenses of Government; the tax is collected and paid into the Treasury of the United States as general revenue, with all the attendant circumstances commonly provided for the collection of any tax; that not a penny of it is set apart for any particular purpose, either before or after it reaches the Treasury; and in fact it will produce millions of dollars of revenue, and therefore is a revenue tax.

* * * The court fails to recognize that a State must bear the financial burdens resulting to it from unemployment, irrespective of the tax imposed (under the unemployment insurance provision) upon employers. It also fails to recognize that the tax upon the employer does not impose the burden upon the State of caring for its unemployed. That burden rests upon the State, and always will, whether it enacts an unemployment compensation act or not. There is no compulsion in this.

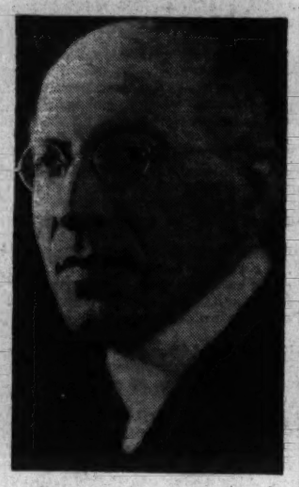
Today's Sermon

By Dr. Abram Simon,
Rabbi of Washington Hebrew Congregation.

Today the Potomac Basin is flooded with the glorious radiance of Japanese cherry blossoms. Thousands come here to enjoy the amazing luxuriance of this heavenly sight. The Japanese thus exposes his soul of beauty. I wonder if those who thus admire this picture of loveliness, are cognizant of the fact that these trees are the good-will offering of the Emperor of Japan. What a welcome we offer to this Oriental splendor with our eyes; with what a disdain we justify the exclusion of the Japanese himself!



I hold no brief for the Japanese people and nation nor for any nation or people or race or religion. I only urge that culture insists on an appreciation of soul-experience wherever and howsoever manifested. We must cultivate mental hospitality.

At Ellis Island we invite or we deport those whom we adjudge, for one reason or another, desirable or undesirable. Every mind is its own Ellis Island. The eye, the ear, the hand, the mouth and the nose are our ports of entry through which millionfold ideas and images, alien and domestic, enter for intellectual and emotional assimilation.

What ideas shall be citizens in the republic of the Soul? What quota do we place upon the immigration of foreign sentiments and beliefs? Are we hospitable only to those ideas with which we agree? Is not culture the hospitality of excellence, even alien or different? The mind must decide whether or not these notions, alien or homegrown, are fatal to our American soul-expression and cannot and must not be incorporated in the citizenry of our American mentality and culture.

During the early days of our World War, when influenza swept through the land, we were permitted to hold sessions in the open air provided we kept three or four feet apart. Somehow, epidemic or not, we have continued the same practice in our social life. Some kind of virus has infected us, and Jews and Christians are sitting three and four feet apart, afraid of contact, afraid of poisoning one another, afraid of getting to know one another too well. Alas, an epidemic of good-will has not yet infected the human race!

If believers in God could learn the art of self-criticism, they would see the mote in their own eyes before criticizing the beam in their neighbors'.

Just as religions must learn to respect one another, so Christians and Jews as individuals must build a highway over which they may pass to one another in mutual respect. As individuals there is no unbridgeable chasm which separates us. We feed and dress alike; we breathe the same air and enjoy the same sports. We have the same sense of sin and the same joy of courage. We are lovers of art and have the same outlook on idealism and morality. Why should we, who love the same things, hate one another? Culture is an appreciation of excellence wherever found, and if religionists will cultivate the habit of saying a good word for the excellences in one another they will inevitably prepare the highway of a cordiale entente. And this is the message of the cherry blossoms.

'Atonement' Topic For Lesson-Sermon

"Doctrine of Atonement" is the subject of the lesson-sermon in all the Churches of Christ, Scientist, tomorrow. The Golden Text is from John 1:29: "John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold, the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world."

Excellent Cast Catches Spirit Of Weird Film

'Love From Stranger' Is Loaded With Suspense on Capitol Screen.

"LOVE FROM A STRANGER." Trafalgar Films picturization for American distribution through United Artists of a play by Frank Vosper, founded on the story by Agatha Christie, costarring Ann Harding and Basil Rathbone, with Binnie Hale, Bruce Seaton, Jean Cadell, Bryan Powley, Joan Hickson, Donald Calthrop and Eugene Leahy. Directed by Rowland V. Lee. Previewed Tuesday, April 13.

Here is a celluloid fable that gets itself under way as an innocuous sort of triangular romance, and then, not too suddenly but with a slow-moving and cumulative power, transforms itself into as thrilling a melodrama as one would care to see.

The whole shuddery business has its inception, with the apparently innocent errand of a handsome young man's renting a London apartment from an equally attractive young woman who only then has won a terrific prize in a Paris lottery. Perceiving the romantic opportunity she always has craved, Carol Howard tosses over the impecunious youth to whom she has been engaged to cast her fortunes—or misfortunes, as they turn out to be—with Gerald Lovell, as thoroughgoing a villain as you would meet in a world tour consuming a month of Sundays.

Mr. Lovell is a young fellow who was physically impaired by his experiences in the World War, and so goes about luring impressionable young women into matrimony, persuading them to sign papers willing away their every earthly possession and then merrily stabbing them in the back, or something equally as fatal.

A Finely Played Scene.

The climax of "Love from a Stranger" is reached in the scene in which Ann Harding, as the theretofore unsuspecting bride, becomes aware that she is married to a madman. It will be no part of these hurried appraisals to expose in what manner Miss Harding thwarted the sinister schemes of Basil Rathbone, but it will be some part of them to set forth with what fine skill this scene is played.

Never having been one of the Ann Harding habitual addicts, it is a pleasure to announce, as already has been done in these columns following the preview of the picture, that this blonde actress in her present subject does probably the best bit of acting she has contributed to the screen since "East Lynne." Basil Rathbone, in one of the most distasteful and unsympathetic roles he ever has played, is superb. His madman is a real madman. I doubt that Mr. Rathbone fancied this assignment a great deal, except as a possible outlet for the sterling ability as an actor which he possesses. There must have been slight solace to his vanity in the realization that he was impersonating one of the most abominable characters ever conceived by the mind of playwright. But he does a superlative job of assuming all of the attributes of a maniacal killer. There are others in the English cast—this film was made on the other side—who do almost as well in parts that demand far less. Notable among these are Binnie Hale and Bruce Seaton, who plays the role of the abandoned lover who eventually lands on his feet. The remainder of the principals do not especially matter, since they are little known on this side of the Atlantic.

The whole point is that "Love From a Stranger" is well acted, well directed and well photographed and serves as evidence that the British studios are rapidly acquiring the knack of lending suspense and errie quality to their goose-pimple shadow dramas.

Casa Loma Clicks Again.

The stage bill at Loew's Capitol this week is headlined by that most melodious of popular broadcast and stage orchestra, Glen Gray's Casa Loma Band. Mr. Gray has with him as specialists on this visit the monumental "Pee-Wee" Hunt, Kenny Sarget and Tarry Green, a young woman of charm and poise. There is genuine musical merit in this stage presentation of an orchestra that has been recognized as one of utmost interpretative precision in rendering the numbers with which it concerns itself. That is borne out by the present program on the Capitol stage.

Not many more make up this stage bill. Fred Lighter, assisted by a young woman by the name of Roscella McQueen, has himself more or less of a time out on the ramp in front of the orchestra, and Mady and Cord demonstrate a degree of athletic skill that is little short of amazing, since half of the team is a short, but buxom, young woman who has developed a tremendous capacity for "taking it." Outside of a few adagio dancers—and I have never been able to solve the problem of why anyone ever is an adagio dancer — I never have seen anyone tossed around much more than Miss Mady or Cord, as the case may be.

"Call It a Day," Preserves on Screen All the Facile Humor of Stage Comedy

Adventures of One Spring Day Form Foundation of Study of Home Life.

"CALL IT A DAY." Warner Brothers picturization of the stage play by Dodie Smith, featuring Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescourt, Alice Brady, Olivia de Havilland, Roland Young, Bonita Granville, Peggy Wood, Walter Woolf King, Anita Louise, Una O'Connor, Beryl Mercer, Marcia Ralston, Peter Willes and Elsa Buchanan. Directed by Archie L. Mayo. Previewed Monday, April 12. At the Earle Theater.

Ever since the premiere of the stage play in the National Theater, under the auspices of the Theater Guild of New York, we have had a kindly feeling for the naturalistic comedy revealed in "Call It a Day."

BELL.

The play deals with the adventures of a middle-class English family on the first day of spring, when romantic impulses actuate all members of the agreeable Hiltons—husband, wife, two daughters and one son. Each has his or her little peccadillo and no harm comes from any of it, although there are a few fleeting heartaches, a little repentance and a great deal of subtle humor in their experiences.

Roger Hilton consults with the famous actress, Beatrice Gwynn, on the matter of her income tax statement; Mrs. Hilton finds a bit of interest in the protestations of an outlander just back from India; Katherine Hilton, the eldest daughter of the family, becomes desperately infatuated with a young artist, whose wife entertains peculiarly sane ideas of how best to circumvent the wandering inclinations of her husband; Ann Hilton is an idealistic youngster, who falls voilently in love with the pasts of great poets; Martin, the only son, falls in love with the girl next door.

Well-Played Comedy.

Out of this maelstrom of conflicting and personal idiosyncrasies is evolved a comedy that spans only the waking hours of one bright spring day. As I have said, nothing of any consequence comes from all of these divergent and largely surreptitious intrigues, beyond the matter of a great deal of literate and polished amusement. Nothing that was important to the success of the stage comedy has been sacrificed in the celluloid translation of the piece. It is fully as well played on the screen as it was on the boards. Some, no doubt, will think it is executed with even greater skill, although it would be difficult to discount the performances of Philip Merivale, Gladys Cooper and Jeanne Dante in the original production.

Their roles, however, are done full justice in the gelatins by Ian Hunter, Frieda Inescourt and Bonita Granville, one of the most gifted of the younger actresses of the cinema. In addition to these there are to be found in the cast such names as Alice Brady, Beryl Mercer, cast in scarcely more than a "bit;" Una O'Connor, Anita Louise, Roland Young, Peggy Wood and Marcia Ralston. All of these contribute generously to the rounded perfection of a film play that is approached with a keen sense of its inconsequential, but facile, humor. There have been, and still are, many households precisely like the Hiltons', in which there is a mad matutinal scramble for possession of the bathroom, the morning paper is rumpled by the wife and the son's urge to lead an independent life almost precipitates a crisis.

After all is said and done, the Hiltons settle down to their bed hour, after a day of romantic adventure for them all, with the equanimity and sure affection that should mark the orderly conduct of any rational home. All very natural, very amusing and extremely well done from every aspect of production, direction, acting and photography.

Music Dominates Stage.

There also is a considerable stage bill at the Earle this week. It is headlined by that ebullient young singer, Jane Froman, one of the favorites of both radio and living theater. Miss Froman is heard in a well selected program of songs and adds to the musical distinction of a bill that continues Bert Granoff, Carolyn Henry and Dean Herrick for a third week.

These three, tenor, soprano and pipe organist, are presented in a notable variation of the acts they have offered during the first fortnight of their local engagement. Request numbers form a large part of Mr. Granoff's program, the popular choice seeming to run to ballads. There will be a constant change of numbers, and also a change of pace, here as the week progresses. Miss Henry's superb voice still is a prime factor in the success of the turn and Dean Herrick has quickly established himself as a master of the pipe organ console and multiple keyboards.

Other participants in the stage goings-on include Walter Dare Wahl and Emmett Oldfield, gymnasts with a fine knack of comedy; Chilton and Thomas, those two amazing young dancers, who first came to fame in Al Jolson's "Wonder Bar," and Gwynne, the master of illusion.

Columbia

"SEVENTH HEAVEN." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play by Austin Strong, adapted to the screen by Melville Baker, costarring James Stewart and Simone Simon, with Jean Hersholt, Gregory Ratoff, Gale Sondergaard, J. Edward Bromberg, John Qualen, Victor Kilian, Mady Christians, Rafaela Ottiano, Georges Renavent, Paul Porcasi and a cast of thousands. Directed by Henry King. Reviewed Friday afternoon, repeat engagement, by Sally Stroud.

Forget the quarrel about whether Gaynor was better than Simone Simon as Diane, and ditto with Charles Farrell and James Stewart, as Chico, in this rejuvenated version of the garret idyll. You will enjoy the simple story more if you are not harassed by comparisons.

Both girls have a petite fragility, both young men are "remarkable fellows"; it is still the tale of how a street cleaner reclaims a child of the Parisian gutters, and of how her love for him causes her to lose her harsh fears of life nad people.

There is no sophistry in the story; there are no swank sets, no musical comedy numbers. But there are several finely delineated characters and you will like cunning little Simone and Chevalier-lipped Stewart, in case you have not seen them before. Whether this film will do for the modern team what it did for the earlier one is doubtful, though a portion of every audience will always choose live-in-the-simple-mode.

The newsreel contains several interesting shots. "Bars and Stripes" is a fairly engaging comedy of the trials of a juvenile orchestra. Nelle Goodelle stars in another brief moment of quasi-comedy about a meat-ball king.

Glen Echo Park's New Songstress

When Glen Echo Park, Washington's free-admission amusement center, throws open its gates this afternoon, several innovations will be introduced. David McWilliams, who will conduct his own 12-piece swing band this season, will have as a featured vocalist Miss Kitty Simons, a singer who is said to have a peculiar faculty for pleasing audiences. It is Miss Simons' likeness that appears above.

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, April 16.—Idol Chatter: Dick Powell gets oodles of fan letters kicking about overuse of hands in singing, but the habit seems uncontrollable. Alice Faye's nose does even more of a nip-up than Gloria Swanson's. Do not believe the publicity puff that the size of Martha Raye's mouth is a makeup trick: Add good fellows: Fred MacMurray. How long ere producers will discover that Eleanor Powell can also act? Now they are calling Shirley Temple and Jane Withers "Babes in the Holly-wood." What difference did it make when Buster Crabbe changed his name to Larry?

ELEANOR POWELL.

Jack Oakie has the first nickel he ever earned (for fetching a bucket of beer) incased in a gold locket for luck.

Peas from the same pod: Joe Penner and Frank McHugh. When I told a talkative actress that Grace Moore once had to remain speechless for six months to save her voice, I got a dirty look. Only thing that might entice me to try ice skating is Sonja Henie's graceful whirls. Candidate for prettiest legs: Lily Damita.

What's happened to the red-head brigade; there's not a real "Clara Bow type" on the screen today.

Miriam Hopkins's conversation has a way of forking off on new paths without warning. Comedian you would never pick from life: Mischa Auer, I never meet DeWitt Jennings without a subconsicous desire to see if he is shadowing someone.

Consensus of opinion: Jean Harlow is more clinging vine-ish with brown hair, but her forte is platinum sex appeal. Cesar Romero looks the picture of comfort in those loose flowing collars.

Four of every five Hollywood parties are "policy affairs." Given for a purpose, as it were. Hosts and guests wish to see and be seen by the right people—the "right people" being those who can boost careers. Youngsters seeking fame go to be "discovered." Oldsters, clinging to the brink of the downslide, go to look their best under soft lights, and you would be surprised how many make sure there will be soft lights before they accept invitations.

The star-wife of a producer told me one day, "I hate to give parties. Of 100 guests, 30 are my business friends, 40 are my husband's studio associates, 25 are relatives or policy guests—and the remdining five are friends." "Why do you have 100 guests? Why not six or ten?" I asked. She sighed: "Nearly all my parties start with ten. They just grow."

Funniest story of the week is one told by Guy Kibbee at Lakeside: A producer sneaked into his home and kissed his wife on the nape of her neck. Then he punched her jaw. When she recovered her wits, Mrs. Producer demanded, "What was the idea of kissing me, and then playing rough house?" "The sock," snapped her husband, "was for not turning around to see who it was!"

Metropolitan

"SWING HIGH, SWING LOW." Paramount picturization of a play by George Manker Watters and Arthur Hopkins, adapted to the screen by Virginia Van Upp and Oscar Hammerstein II, costarring Carole Lombard and Fred MacMurray, with Charles Butterworth, Jean Dixon, Harvey Stephens, Dorothy Lamour, Cecil Cunningham, Franklin Pangborn and Charles Judels. Directed by Mitchell Leisen. Reviewed Friday afternoon, repeat engagement, by Arthur Branscombe.

Carole Lombard, Fred MacMurray and Fred's torrid trumpet swung back before eyes of local moviegoers yesterday at the Metropolitan, following, as it deserved to, a highly successful run week before last at the Earle.

This new effort by the duo which put "Hands Across the Table" over recently achieves success almost entirely because of the smooth combination of dialogue, acting and music of superior quality.

The story is simply the ever-popular, time-honored triangle, in which the heroine, Carole, inspires the hero, Fred, to bigger and better things, and is promptly given the go-by by said hero in favor of the third party, Dorothy Lamour, when times get good. After the third party has ruined the hero, the heroine re-enters to re-inspire him, forgive all and they both live happily ever after, one suspects.

That a movie built on such a much-used plot can be a success must needs be explained by factors other than story. These are provided in abundance by the clever dialogue, well delivered by Charles Butterworth and Jean Dixon, as well as Carole (I-still-talk-this-way-all-in-a-rush-in-one-breath) and MacMurray.

Three sparkling songs, hits in anyone's book, and a couple of others very easy to listen to, help brighten up the piece immeasurably, and the exceptional photography also is partly responsible for the ease with which the show glides across the screen.

Bing Crosby Is At His Best in 'Waikiki' Film

Bob Burns, Martha Raye Supply Comedy Interest in Palace Picture.

"WAIKIKI WEDDING." Paramount picturization of a story by Frank Butler and Don Hartman, adapted to the screen by Frank Butler, Don Hartman, Walter DeLeon and Francis Marsh, starring Bing Crosby, with Bob Burns, Martha Raye, Shirley Ross, George Barbier, Leif Erikson, Grady Sutton, Mitchell Lewis and ensemble of Hawaiians. Directed by Frank Tuttle. Reviewed Friday afternoon by Mary Harris.

This "Waikiki Wedding" carrying-on is the equivalent of a tabloid pleasure cruise to Hawaii—except that it's more exciting than the average cruise.

Just buy your little ticket at the Palance entrance (the boat sails every minute), and you're off to the blue Pacific with Bing Crosby, Martha Raye and Bob Burns. Bob hasn't got his bazooka, but he has the newest object of his affections, Wafford, a handsome little black pig. Wafford is almost as funny as Martha Raye.

Opening with an island wedding feast, celebrated with most elegant hip-swinging, the show concludes with an American "happy ending," featuring Bing and Shirley Ross, also Bob Burns and Martha and their little Wafford.

Considered as a vehicle for the Crosby warbling and the Raye-Burns brand of fun, "Waikiki Wedding" holds up pretty well. From any other point of view, or without its stars, the show presents a facade of sheer nuttiness.

Slightly Nutty Yarn.

The general idea of the yarn is that a "pineapple queen" who wins her royalty in an advertising contest becomes too, too bored with Hawaii and wants to go right back home. This would discount Hawaiian lure too much, so advertising man Bing Crosby concocts a kidnaping and series of adventures for the "pineapple queen." Everybody has a sky-hooting time—sailing, singing, lovemaking, running away from a fake volcano. All is sweeter'n a pineapple sundae until the pineapple queen's hometown boy friend and her uncle show up.

Such a hokus-jokus!

There are plenty of tuneful songs in the Hawaiian manner, but one wonders whether the audience wouldn't like a little more change from the single musical type, appealing as it is. For us, anyway, it was a grand relief when, at the end of one of these sentimental yodelings, Martha Raye started to mess around with a lot of "jam." Among the prettier numbers are "Blue Hawaii," "Sweet Is the Word For You" and "In a Little Hula Heaven."

Bing Crosby is in his best form in his hula-croonings. But this young gentleman miraculously improves in every picture. Is there to be no end to it?

RKO-Keith's

"TOP OF THE TOWN." Universal picturization of a story by Brown Holmes and Charles Grayson, based on an idea suggested by Lou Brock, featuring Doris Nolan, George Murphy, Hugh Herbert, Gregory Ratoff, Gertrude Nielsen, Ella Logan, Henry Armetta, Ray Mayer and Mischa Auer. Directed by Ralph Murphy. Music by Jimmy McHugh and Harold Adamson. Reviewed Friday evening by Dorothea Lewis.

The jamboree that climaxes this affair was so hot at the dinner show Friday that it blew a fuse or something in the film and ended hostilities for a few minutes!

The next time around it was okay—we waited to see—principally because it's the only spot in the picture in which young George Murphy dances, and he can dance.

If it's a revue you want, there is quite a lot of one here. In fact and in honesty, there is too much. A little less entertainment would have made "Top of the Town" more entertaining.

Universal had some nice ideas to begin with, a thoroughly ingratiating leading man in George Murphy, the insane Hugh Herbert, the aforementioned finale, and Mischa Auer as Hamlet! But Universal cluttered itself up with a lot more people—three sailors, four singers, a child tap star, etc., etc., all of whom have to have their spots. There is even too much of that finale. The shears, Jeeves!

The framework of the plot is very much like that of "On the Avenue"—one of the many richest girls in America, and a young entertainer, a misunderstanding, and the lady buys out the gentleman's show. The lovely thought in this, though, is the lady's idea of bringing art with a capital "A" to the night clubs.

It is right here in the lady's show that Director Murphy seems to miss his best points by playing it straight instead of sharply, and broadly instead of subtly. Part of it is good and it shouldn't be, and why couldn't he leave the hand-waving dancers behind the curtains, but no!

The music throughout is in the hit actegory, with emphasis on the "Jamboree" and the title song.

Miss Doris Nolan doesn't help very much, as the richest girl, because she never quite seems to see that there is a point to the jokes which she isn't supposed to see.

As hinted several times before, we liked George Murphy very much, because he is natural and not too good looking, and grins with his eyes instead of his teeth. Gertrude Niesen should sue the photographers, but she does right well by the "Jamboree" number.

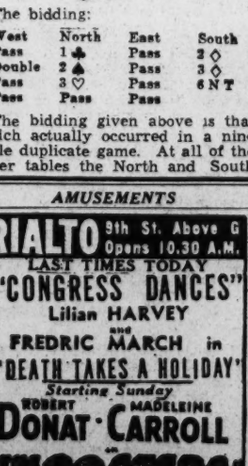
Contract Bridge

By Mrs. Ely Culbertson.

Many times in this column, the reader has been implored to pay some attention to the opponents' bidding. Nine times out of ten, your own hand varies greatly in strength depending on the position and strength of the adverse bids. Perhaps the most elementary example is the value of K x in the opponent's suit. If the suit was bid on your right, the Ace is probably there and your King is worth more than the normal valuation of one-half trick. But if the suit was bid on your left, the reverse is true—your King must be assigned very little value.

But there is such a thing as paying too much attention and respect to the opponents. After all, they are your enemies and will do their best to deceive you. Beware of being an easy mark!

West, dealer.
North-South vulnerable.



The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ♣	Pass	2 ◇
Double	2 ♠	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	3 ♡	Pass	6 N T
Pass	Pass	Pass

The bidding given above is that which actually occurred in a nine table duplicate game. At all of the other tables the North and South players arrived at a grand slam contract without much trouble. But, at the table where the reported bidding took place, West succeeded in frightening North by his psychic double.

The use of the penalty double as a psychic bid is rare and, perhaps for that reason, very effective. With his worthless hand West felt sure that South's forcing takeout of two diamonds would lead his opponents to a makable slam. His penalty double was the only thing that he could think of to intimidate the opponents. He felt very sure that North and South would not stay in a diamond contract and hoped that the double would cause North to doubt the solidity of South's suit.

The psychic had the desired effect. In spite of all poor South could do to entice his partner into a grand slam, North still feared the loss of a diamond trick.

When the opening lead was made, declarer spread his hand and mournfully remarked that he could make 16 tricks. Perhaps the bottom score will teach North to listen to his partner's bids in the future as well as to those of the opponents.

Several Parties Mark Flower Show Opening

Sixth Narcissus Exhibit of Garden Club Under Way at Alexandria; Mrs. Boothe Among Those Who Entertain.

By Jessie Ash Arndt.

Several luncheons and a cocktail party were given yesterday afternoon in Alexandria in connection with the opening of the sixth annual narcissus show of the Garden Club of Virginia. Mrs. Gardner Lloyd Boothe, vice president of the club, entertained for the judges of the exhibit and Mrs. Raphbone Smith was hostess at luncheon to visitors from out of town. Later Miss Anne Lewis Jones, of the Fairfax Garden Club, entertained at a cocktail party.

The show, held in the armory, is considered one of the finest of its kind in the country and attracted flower lovers, not only from Washington, but also from New York and other States. There were flowers everywhere, specimen blooms and artistic arrangements with evergreen boughs and fruit blossoms as a background.

The show continues today and many of the visitors who are making the tour of old houses sponsored by the Alexandria association will stop to see the flowers. Members of the Fairfax Garden Club, who were assisting yesterday, today will desert flowers for horses and will be at the Fairfax Horse Show this afternoon. Among them was Mrs. Amon Chilcott, who was chairman of the show. They also included Mrs. Frederick D. Richardson, one of those at the table where bouquets of surplus flowers were sold, blossoms which were beautiful but not quite fine enough to be entered in competition. She wore a rust-colored suit with a black sweater blouse and a brimmed black hat with flowers circling the crown. Other "salesladies" were Mrs. J. C. Bennett, in a plum-colored suit with a small black hat trimmed with a cluster of flowers, and Mrs. Lenig Sweet, who wore a suit of powder blue with a hat and accessories of darker blue. Mrs. Richardson's sister, Mrs. Robert Graham, was assisting at the door, as were Mrs. Herbert Donovan and Mrs. William Gerard Sheehan, all of Fairfax.

Rosehill Opened.

Mrs. William R. Massie, of Richmond, whose home, Rosehill, in Greenwood, is to be opened for the Virginia Garden Club tour, was making the rounds of exhibits with Mrs. McCook Knox, who was one of the judges in classes of arrangement. Mrs. Knox, who wore a blue suit with a scarf and cluster of clover blossoms in thistle shade at the neck, was a classmate of Mrs. Massie's daughter, Mrs. James Gordon Smith, when she attended Spence School, in New York. Mrs. Massie is honorary president of the Virginia Garden Club and one of its best-known members.

Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster and Mrs. Ralph Church were among those who drove from Washington to see the show. Mrs. A. R. Van Arsdale and Mrs. Stewart MacDonald, Mrs. Ernest May, Mrs. Parke A. Gallelier and Mrs. Walter B. Guy were among others from the city.

Mrs. D. C. Sands, of Middleburg, president of the Virginia Garden Club; Mrs. Frederick Prince, and Mrs. Thomas Atkinson, also of Middleburg, arrived together.

Among others who were there and who were included in the group from out of town entertained at the luncheon given by Mrs. Smith were Mrs. Shelton Short, president of the Petersburg Garden Club; Mrs. William Spotswood, Mrs. Robert Pritchard, Mrs. Lelia McCandlish, Mrs. S. H. Cole, Mrs. W. J. Miller, Mrs. E. B. Cameron, all of Petersburg; Mrs. Richard Fay Jackson, president of the Chevy Chase Garden Club; Mrs. William Wayt Gibbs, of Staunton; Miss Eleanor Chamberlain, president of the Leesburg Club, and Mrs. Frederick T. Gauze and Mrs. R. J. Reid, of Chatham. From Warrenton were Mrs. George Lawrence, Mrs. S. A. Appleton, president of the Warrenton club; Mrs. William Roland and Mrs. L. V. Froment, narcissus chairman. Mrs. Holmes Baker, Mrs. Ernest Helsenstein and Mrs. John E. Shell, of Frederick, also attended, as did Mrs. Floyd Harris, of Aldie, chairman of the narcissus test committee of the Virginia Garden Club, and Mrs. Stewart Walker.

Mrs. Holden Attends.

Mrs. Charles F. Holden, president of the Alexandria Garden Club, was there, wearing a beige tweed suit and a brown felt beret. Also present was Mrs. Louis C. Barley, young bride of Judge Barley, of Alexandria, who wore a light beige costume with hat and accessories of tan.

Mrs. S. M. Dillard, who has just returned from a motor trip to Natchez, Miss., on which she was accompanied by Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, had with her Mrs. Balfour Miller, who was organizer of the Natchez pilgrimage. Monday evening Mrs. Dillard will be hostess to a group of friends at the Bell Haven Club, when Mrs. Miller will tell of the old mansions of Mississippi, illustrating her talk with slides, and appearing in costumes of the old South.

THE MERRY WHIRL

By Marylyn

If you ever have thought you had trouble with the servant problem, just listen to this. Ann Mitchell and her mother, Mrs. John T. H. Mitchell, who are leaving soon for England and the coronation, have some friends there with a lovely old estate at Carlton Terrace. For THE day they have invited 300 friends to come and enjoy the gay pageantry from their gardens and partake of refreshments while there. Well, there are a few complications. In the first place the nearby streets will be closed from 6 o'clock in the morning until 6 o'clock at night. So the 300 will have to remain for three meals that day. Even that was thought of by the host and hostess and they made elaborate plans for entertainment, then the blow fell. Their chef, without whom they could not get along, left. They made the rounds of London in search of a substitute, but narry a king for their kitchen. Now they are seriously contemplating importing such a necessary person from this country.

Mrs. Matthew John Whittall, whose collection of priceless old violins is at the Library of Congress, was having luncheon in the Shoreham the other day. She looked so fresh and crisp, just like a breath of spring. Her dark ensemble had a dainty starched organdy vestee, and her hat, a most unusual one, was decorated with white blossoms all over the top of the crown.

Not far from her was Bill Ryan, big, blond and smiling, whose companion's silver fox cape of at least 20 beautifully matched skins, was the cynosure of all eyes, with her cluster of mammoth orchids running a close second.

The younger riding set is excited about the fact that little Paulina Longworth is coming from Cincinnati to compete in the Junior Hunt horse show at Bradley Farms tomorrow. After the show she will leave for Louisville and the Derby.

The presence of J. Edgar Hoover at the wrestling matches the other night evidently meant nothing to the "grunt and groan" artists when they decided to forget all rules. He, with two aides, was just another fan, shaking his fist and yelling "Kill him" at appropriate moments.

Also seen at the matches was Johnnie Wheeler with Doug Fairbanks, sr., and Doug's double, who has the Fairbanks smile down to a fine art.

Miss Margaret Delano Gage will be "at home" during Sundays in April from 5 to 7, at her residence, 4 Dupont Circle.

Mary Clark deLashmutt Wed to George E. Monk

Ceremony Performed in Chevy Chase M. E. Church; Frances Elizabeth Owens Married to Douglass Porter at Home.

In the presence of members of the families and close friends, Miss Frances Elizabeth Owens, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Clarence J. Owens, of Chevy Chase, Md., was married at 4:30 yesterday afternoon to Mr. Douglass McDaniel Porter, son of Mrs. Samuel Judson Porter, of this city, and the late Dr. Porter. The ceremony was performed at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Edward Hughes officiating.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a redingote gown of white satin and lace. Her finger-tip length tulle veil fell from a coronet trimmed with lace and orange blossoms, and she carried a bouquet of bride's roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Owens' frock of periwinkle blue mousseline was made on princess lines with lace panels and lace at the neck. She wore a picture hat and carried Joanna Hill roses and lilies of the valley.

Of interest to Washington was the marriage on Thursday in Old Deerfield, Mass., of Miss Frances Loring Abercrombie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James D. Abercrombie, of Greenfield, to Mr. Malcolm Knifton Cameron, son of Mrs. Angus Cameron and the late Mr. Cameron. The bride is a niece of former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, and went to school in Washington.

The ceremony took place in the White Church, the Rev. Charles Merriam officiating, assisted by the Rev. Arthur Pratt. Mrs. Charles Woodruff Stevens, of Wellesley Hills, Mass., was matron or honor and Mr. Samuel Cameron, of Princeton, N. J., served as his brother's best man. The ushers were Mr. Randolph Van Miller, Mr. Hanford Hight, Mr. Denham Lunt and Mr. Douglas Abercrombie.

After a wedding trip to Jamaica, Mr. and Mrs. Cameron will reside in Crappaqua, N. Y.

Miss Potts Wed To Mr. Marshall

The Universalist National Memorial Church was the scene of the wedding at 6 o'clock last evening of Miss Jane Alice Potts, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Potts, of Washington, to Mr. John Page Marshall, son of Mr. and Mrs. James J. Marshall, of Farmville, Va. The Rev. Frederick W. Perkins performed the ceremony, which was followed by a small dinner at the Mayflower.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a light blue street length frock with a felt hat to match, and carried an arm bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant was Miss Jean Parker, who wore a rose beige frock with a beige hat and carried blue delphinium and talisman roses. Mr. Edwin R. Marshall served as his brother's best man.

After a brief wedding trip, Mr. Marshall and his bride will reside in Washington. The latter chose as her going-away costume a light gray sharkskin suit with a tailored coat of the same color.

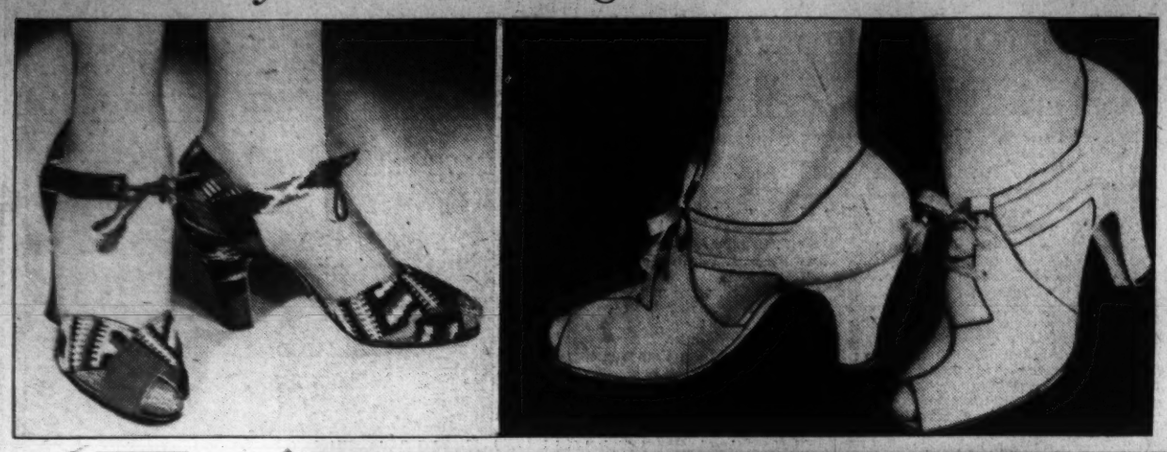
Sandal Styles Are Designed to Harmonize With Costume



To harmonize with a summer of vibrant-colored fashions, the toeless, backless sandal at the extreme left, is made of hand-woven fabric from Guatemala. Reflecting the current trend of shorter skirts, lower necklines and short sleeves, the sandal-oxford (left), is an ideal daytime shoe; in patent leather, tinted suedes, gabardine.

With slender cutouts and tiny perforations, the flattering shoe, above left, was designed especially to accompany prints and sheers; in white, it is grand to accent pastels and all-white costumes. For romantic summer clothes, the decollete sandal (above right) with fine corded-like stitching which gives the illustration of slenderness.

Women's Shoes Slowly Revert To Barefoot Era

Latest Styles Decree Even More Exposure in Footwear.

By Ethel Ehlen,
The Post Fashion Editor.

TO BE SMARTLY shod this summer, means that not only will your shoes be toeless, but also decollete as to back. Shoes are gradually reverting to the barefoot sandal era, it would seem; each season they are featuring more and more the exposed foot. While the general theme appears to be simplicity, there is much intricate detail—the newest models prove that shoes are no longer considered as just another accessory, but an important highlight of the costume.

With skirts getting shorter, shoes are getting higher; they may be brief as to toe, heel and side cutouts, but they are being designed higher as to top. Flaunting perforations, appliques, pipings, bandings, buttons, buckles, and novelty straps, shoes this season are almost stealing the show from the rest of the wardrobe. While there are many interpretations in footwear, practically every type of shoe has been sandalized; from the sandal-oxford, through the regulation sandal, to the pump sandal. Another proof of the fact that shoes are going extremely decollete.

Materials Varied.

Materials are almost as varied as costume fabrics; likewise color tones. Interesting and sometimes exotic color combinations are developed. Hand-woven materials vie with leathers of various kinds, suit materials, and glove fabrics; shoes in the modern manner, have a definite tie-up with the entire costume. Instead of buying a pair of shoes to harmonize with a frock, as formerly, many fastidious women are matching costumes to shoe wardrobes. And in the current scheme of things, every suit or frock has a pair of shoes all its own.

The newest idea in stockings is based on the costume trend of coordinating colors and of matching skin tones. In fact, this trend has become so important that Antoine, the famed Paris hair stylist and beautician, has been called upon to collaborate with stocking manufacturers. The result is—stockings especially created for blondes, brunettes, the titian-haired, and for sun-tanned complexions of all types. Influenced by the coming Pan American Exposition, and emulating the beauty of dark Mexican skins, a new deep color tone has also been created and is suggested by stylists as the ideal complement to all-white and gay-printed costumes.

Since hemlines are getting shorter each season, it is imperative that both shoes and stockings be selected with the utmost discrimination. Regardless of the chic of your costume, if these important accessories are all wrong or detract in any way from the general picture, the smart effect is entirely lost.

Use for Old Percolator.

If you wonder what to do with your old coffee percolator that is perfectly good but out of date, when you prepare fresh asparagus, stand it on end in the percolator and cook it. The asparagus doesn't "flop" over and the tips are steamed beautifully.

Leftover Cake or Pie Makes Tasty Pudding

Do you often have cake or pie left over from a meal and not enough for the next meal? Here is a grand way to use it and at the same time to achieve a delightful fruit pudding.

With a fork, break up the pie or cake into a well-greased baking dish, topping with sliced fruit (fresh, canned or stewed) and sugar. (You will, of course, want to use the same kind of fruit used in the pie or a variety that blends nicely.) Bake in a moderately hot oven (375 degrees F.) about 25 minutes or until fruit is tender (if fresh fruit is used). Serve with custard sauce.

Keeps Frosting Soft.

When a boiled frosting hardens too quickly, add, drop by drop, a small quantity of boiling water, and beat. If, however, it then refuses to stiffen, heat in double boiler until icing loses gloss.

Keeping Fish Intact.

When baking fish, place a piece of clean muslin or cheesecloth in the bottom of the pan, then, when the fish is baked, it can be lifted out of the pan and turned over on the serving dish without breaking it.

Keeps Soap Handy.

To save soap, time and temper, get a 10-cent wire soap dish and fasten on your cleaning pail—then the soap is always where you want it when you clean.

A Woman's New York

New York, April 16.

AMONG the most interesting of our recent lady guests has been Mme. Aurora Quezon, wife of the brilliant President of the Philippine Islands. The fashion girls, especially, kept an alert eye on her. For her native gowns might well be adapted for American use, especially at formal afternoon parties.

ALICE HUGHES.

"Most of our women have never adopted Occidental dress," Mme. Quezon told me. "Except for business wear, the great majority of us dress in our traditional garments, most of which have trains."

She showed me some of her wardrobe, and the dresses are extraordinarily graceful and beautiful. Many of them are made of "pina," a fabric woven from the fiber of pineapple leaves, and as light as a breath. Nearly all the bodices of Philippine gowns are made of this lovely material, with a delicate Chinese cloth called "jusi" used for the skirt. Mme. Quezon wore one of these long dresses to a formal tea given by Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, and was the belle of the afternoon.

Incidentally, this is the day that Philippine women are voting on the question of woman's suffrage in the islands—naturally a subject in which the President's wife is vitally interested.

"We need 300,000 women to vote yes," she tells me. "Our new constitution provides for this pebescite." Fascinating to realize that 'way over in the other half of the world our brown-skinned sisters are deciding whether or not to take a hand in the business of government!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Gertrude Mayer has started a new "relaxing" course in her famous Mannequin Academy here. Gertrude, who was once a wondrous model herself, says the reason her girls always look so cool and collected is because she teaches them to relax—and she recommends such study to all of us during the warm weather—an idea which seems very sound to me. But I haven't the vaguest notion when I could find time to relax, even if I learned how. Have you? . . .

Theres' good news for us here in the word that Dorothy Stone, daughter of dear old Fred, and her husband, Charles Collins, are to be co-starred in our next musical show, "When the Cat's Away." As this is written they're dickering over actual terms. Fred, who has been very sick for months, has almost recovered his health, Dot tells me.

Our Society of Gourmets, as you know, always lures me to its monthly orgies, most of which are devoted to the fancier type of European cooking. This month, however, they fooled us by moving to the State of Maine for their food, and delighted me with scallops, cherrystone clams, hardshell crabs and other gastronomic delights of New England. As an old New Hampshire girl, I enjoyed this repast more than any of the Gourmets' debauches I have yet attended. Treat a scallop with the proper tartare sauce and you surely have something! But the best meal I ever ate was in the city of New Orleans, which proves I am not provincial!

* * * *

It is a shame that New York life is apt to make us skeptical. A few weeks ago 19-year-old Margaret Murtanya haled her pappy into court because he abused her for smoking a cigarette. Now I find she is "singing" in a Brooklyn night club. The most astonishing thing in New York, you may be sure, is "publicity."

* * * *

I am always interested in Kay Francis, for she was the first girl I ever interviewed when I went to Hollywood. That was too many years ago. Now I only get publicity about her, and the newest is that she perfumes her luggage to remove the "leathery smell." What a childish story—but what a grand girl! I hope she is as natural and sweet as she was when she first went West in '29!

Contest Invites Favorite Recipes Of 'Old School'

IN THIS SECTION of the country, full of traditions, even recipes are handed down from mother to daughter and are allowed to stray away from the family only into the hands of a favored few. Do you have a tried and tested recipe that has come to you from generations past?

This week's recipe contest, held by the Post, is for favorite traditional recipes, probably orignated by the cooks of the "old school." The awards for this contest are $3 for first prize, $2 for the second winner and $1 for each of the three additional winners.

Your family may have a favorite recipe for baked beans, baked ham, fried chicken, turtle soup, devil's food cake, meat loaf, crepe suzettes, roast turkey and dressing, fruit punch, carrot pudding, lobster a la neuburg or strawberry mousse. Or you may have some other food that has made a special "hit" in your family circle

What ever your recipe is, copy it neatly and send it to Rebekah Blake, the Post Food Editor, so she will receive it not later than Saturday noon. Be sure to copy your name and address neatly on your recipe.

Only one recipe will be accepted from each contestant.

Rug Shampooing Advice Offered; Air Clothes Kept in Closets.

By Rebekah Blake.

NATIONAL HONEY WEEK is to be observed from April 19 to April 26. This brings the healthful honey to its place in the foreground of foods for it is is one of the oldest of Nature's foods and yet one that is overlooked very often.

Strained honey may now be purchased in attractive glass containers that make it possible for the homemaker to see exactly what she is buying and these help to make it even more acceptable for table use.

The next time you open a jar of honey, don't be satisfield to use it merely as a spread, because there are so many other uses for this product that are economical, healthful and helpful in adding that variety to the daily job of meal planning. Have you ever tried honey bread? Any one of the following recipes is interesting and appealing, easily prepared, healthful and honestly makes a tea sandwich that can be considered more than "just a bite." The content of honey in these recipes will insure their staying moist to the very last crumb. Honey may be used as a natural sweet in many other foods. It may be used in candy, cakes and pies and in such foods as French dressing and baked ham. Homemade rolls may be made using honey and have a faintly different flavor that is most acceptable.

Use honey in your salads and desserts. Try baked apples with honey instead of sugar. This new sweet will permeate the apple tissue and blend in with it to form a delightfully flavored dish. Used to sweeten other fruits, it rapidly serves its purpose as a flavoring.

Honey is such a versatile flavoring that it may be used for most any food from old-fashioned baked beans to the most delicate beverage. For this last purpose, honey is a suitable sweetening agent for it does not need to be melted as do some sugars.

Here is a few interesting recipes using honey.

Orange Nut Bread.

2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup honey
1 egg
1½ tablespoons grated orange rind
½ teasspoon grated orange rind
¾ cup orange juice
2¼ cups flour
2½ teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon soda
½ teaspoon salt
¾ cup chopped nuts

Cream the honey and fat; add the beaten egg, add orange rind. Sift the dry ingredients and add alternately with orange juice. Add chopped nuts. Bake at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 10 minutes.

Honey Date Nut Bread.

1 cup dates
1 cup boiling water
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup honey
1 egg
1½ cups flour
1 cup nuts
¼ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder

Cut dates in small pieces. Cook in the water until they are done. Mix until thick. Cool. Cream honey and shortening. Add beaten egg and date mixture and nuts. Sift together dry ingredients and add. Bake in moderate oven 325 degrees for 1 hour and 20 minutes.

Fig Bread.

½ cup figs
½ cup raisins
2 tablespoons shortening
1 cup honey
1 egg
2½ cups flour
½ teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
¾ cup sweet milk
¼ cup sour milk
½ teaspoon soda
1 cup nuts

Cut raisins and figs in small pieces. Cream together shortening and add honey. Add beaten egg. Sift dry ingredients together. Reserve a little to flour fruit and nuts. Add alternately with milk. Add nuts and fruit. Bake in moderate oven at 325 degrees for 1 hour and 10 minutes.

Besides these bread recipes you will be pleased to try this delicious honey salad dressing. By following the suggested variations, this dressing may be adapted equally well to vegetable, fruit and fish salads.

Natural Honey—A Versatile Sweet

Honey is a natural sugar that is fast coming into importance in every-day cooking. It is a versatile sweet that may be used to sweeten most any food from the substantial baked ham to delicate strawberry ice cream. Here are shown honey date nut bread and baked apple salad. The flavors of these foods are much improved by the addition of honey.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Should She Continue to Hope or Try to Forget, Asks Girl Whose Beau Has Become Indifferent.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: You have given advice to several friends of mine so I am bringing my problem to you. I went with a boy from my home town and we were very much in love. He moved away to another city, but we still continued together until about six months ago. Since then we have broken up and made up several times.

* * * *

After our last split-up he began writing to me, but judging from his attitude on his recent visits, I am certain he doesn't love me any more. But I do know he stills holds me in high esteem. The trouble is—I love him still.

* * * *

Miss Haworth, he has told his sister he wishes he could appreciate me as he should. The trouble is—he is too sure of me. My love is too salient. He has shown how he depends on me and knows I will do anything for him. What shall I do? Go on being the friend he has always found me to be and hope he will eventually reciprocate my devotion? Or should I discontinue writing to him and try to find forgetfulness elsewhere? Yours truly, WAITING.

* * * *

Meet Fire With Fire.

DEAR WAITING: This appears to be an instance of a person holding winning cards without knowing how to play them correctly. So long as the boy admires and respects you and actually regrets the fact that he does not appreciate you as he should, the odds are in your favor. If confronted with the notion that he was about to be deprived forever of your generous devotion, I daresay belated appreciation of your worth would sweep over him like a tidal wave.

* * * *

Few men even realize they are in love, much less exert themselves to declare their hand, until and unless they find themselves in a position where they must be the aggressor in courtship. They are for the most part bored with and subconsciously resentful of the woman who wears her heart on her sleeve. Hunters by nature, it's not in their makeup to appreciate the girl they can have for the asking.

* * * *

I think it would be a strategic error to dramatically surrender your claims on this boy's affection. Rather than break off the correspondence abruptly, why not taper it off gradually? Don't write so promptly or so regularly or so yearningly. Why not treat him more or less as he treats you, while making a real effort to find other heart interests nearer at hand! Adopt an attitude of indifference about whether or not he comes to see you, and if and when he does come, maintain a casual front.

* * * *

You have seen your mistake in making him "too sure" of your love. The only way to rectify that error is to make him less sure or definitely uncertain regarding the state of your emotions. You will have to be more of a coquette. Don't be everlastingly ready to suit your convenience to his. Annex another beau or two and let him understand that he is to take his turn if he wishes to see you. A few weeks or months of indifference should revive his original ardor, if it is indeed true that boredom is the real cause of his change of heart. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

My opinion has been asked as to the value of the so-called lie detector as a regular adjunct to the scientific detection of crime.

The device commonly called the "lie detector" is the Keeler polygraph. "Polygraph" means "many writings," and this particular one records in written form the variations in blood pressure, respiration and pulse rate, on a running strip of paper. The suspect sits with the inflated cuff of the blood pressure apparatus around his arm and a belt around his chest to record his breathing. Naturally emotional reactions under questioning are seen in the rise or fall of blood pressure, and in change in respiration and pulse rate.

Apriori a doctor would be inclined to doubt the validity of these instruments. Any kind of emotion, the very fact that a person knew he was under suspicion, would be enough to make records. I have had applicants for life insurance faint while being examined with a blood-pressure apparatus, and every physician knows that the first blood-pressure record is probably inaccurate on account of excitement of the patient.

In spite of that, however, actual experience seems to show that the lie detector in practice works out pretty well. We have one record of a Chicago bank which had tests made on 56 of its employes in order to track down the embezzler of $5,000. Not only was the guilty man discovered, but nine other employes confessed to petty larceny hitherto unknown to the bank officials.

It is all right when the victim confesses after a lie-detector test. But I disagree with Prof. Wigmore in his "Treatise on Evidence," who says that it need only work with a reasonable measure of precision. Since it is an instrument, it seems to me it should work with complete precision all the time.

Another form of lie detector, not in such general use, is that invented by Father Summers, of Fordham University. The suspect holds a small metal slab in his hand, and a tiny current of electricity from a single dry battery is passed to the body. The suspect is asked questions, at first innocent and then pointed. If he has a guilty knowledge of any of the questions, his sweat glands are stimulated and the extra deposit of perspiration on the skin of his hand reduces his resistance to the electric current passing through his body. With this instrument, for instance, a subject is asked to select any card from the

Coronation Revives Ornate Headdresses

Paris (U.P.).—An influence of the Coronation on fashions has been the revival of the use of ornate headdresses for evening wear. Tiaras of gold filigree work are shown in the windows of many smart jewelers, while coronets of gold and precious stones are being made up in modern designs and forms to fit modern styles of hairdressing.

Children Like Cereal With Milk, Brown Sugar

If you have trouble getting your children to eat cereal, try serving cereal with evaporated milk and brown sugar. The brown sugar accentuates the caramelized taste of the milk that has always been a favorite with children, and cereal served this way disappears without coaxing.

3 Yards Are Required For Making One Sheet

Buy sheeting by the yard, allowing 3 yards for each sheet. When making the sheet, turn the hems at both ends, making each 3 inches wide. Turn one hem to one side of the goods and the other hem to the opposite side, then there is no definite top or bottom, right or wrong side. They are reversed in the using and the wear is more evenly distributed.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

IT LOOKS as though even the Yankees were going to have a Southern accent before it's over, not in speech, perhaps, but at least in home decorations. Because with the restorations in Williamsburg, Va., focusing attention on the graciousness of life in the antebellum South, and the rediscovery of Natchez, that lovely, sleepy Mississippi town, where some of the most charming of the old houses have been half hidden in their gardens these 60 years, fashions in furnishings have become Southern.

Now all the manufacturers are copying interesting old designs and furniture found in homes of the South. And just the other day we took a trip to see the opening of an important exhibit of interiors of which the living-room called "Natchez" was not only the featured interior of the show, but the most thoroughly delightful room we'd seen this spring. It was directly inspired by Natchez traditions interpreted in the decorative vernacular of today, so it is pleasant and practical for us who see and like it today.

A spacious room with a white marble mantel and windows to the floor, it had walls of cafe au lait finished at the molding with a wallpaper border festoon, quite simple, in green. Then a carpet covering the entire floor to the baseboards. This was in a cafe au lait ground with floral bouquets in it (for all the world like an old Brussels carpet!). At the windows the glazed percale curtains were cafe au lait, perfectly plain and finished only with white chintz pleated ruffling. Hepplewhite and Sheraton furniture, for the most part, furnish the room, although there is also a Recamier sofa, and several Victorian pieces such as might be found together with charm in the hospitable home of old Natchez.

In rooms of this type samplers and needlepoint of particular family interest are delightful. If you are interested in doing a really fine piece of handwork, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the writer's bulletin, "Sew Yourself a Family History." It contains designs you can copy for your own individual story.

State-Control Labor Program Gains in House

Rep. H. W. Smith Offers Parallel to Ashurst-Sumners Bill.

A movement to reach wages, hours and labor working conditions through State control methods, backed and enforced by the Federal Government, gathered headway in the House yesterday.

The House Judiciary Committee scheduled hearings Tuesday on the Smith bill to prevent shipment of commodities to States which outlaw the working conditions under which the commodities were produced.

The bill was put forward by Representative Howard W. Smith (Democrat), of Virginia, while Administration lawyers were still pondering submission of general Federal wages and hours legislation, in conformance with the Supreme Court's Wagner act decisions.

Smith's move was the second effort in the House to wield to labor's advantage the liberal commerce clause interpretation of the Supreme Court. Beginning May 1, Representative Kent Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, has called Labor sub-committee hearings on the Ellenbogen bill, to set up a "little NRA" in the textile industry.

Representative Smith yesterday sent letters to every member of the House, urging support of "the method of State control0 backed and enforced by the aid of the Federal Government."

"The design of the bill," Smith said, "is to cope with the various economic evils now confronting the Nation through State laws made enfoceable by a Federal statute regulating interstate commerce in the prohibited articles and operating in the field not covered by the recent decisions of the Supreme Court."

Cites Court Rulings.

"It is proposed to render Federal aid to the enforcement of State laws such as the AAA, minimum wages, collective bargaining, child labor, etc."

Smith said this course has been clearly opened by five recent decisions of the Supreme Court, beginning with validation of the Ashurst-Sumners act, providing similar restrictions for prison-made goods.

He listed the court's decision in the Washington minimum wage case, the New York milk case, the Virginian Railway case and the Jones & Laughlin steel case as justifying this procedure.

Chairman William P. Connery of the House Labor Committee said yesterday he was not opposed to the Smith bill, but believed it should have been referred to the Labor Committee.

Connery said he was waiting for advice from the White House before taking any definite steps of his own—believing general Federal wages and hours legislation will be submitted by the President.

Foundation Given Meyer Volumes

Announcement was made yesterday at the home of Mrs. Helen Harris Meyer that the library of her husband, Herman Henry Berlard Meyer, who died last January, has been acquired by the National Home Library Foundation of this city.

The library, said by experts to be one of the finest private collections in the United States, consisting of more than 10,000 volumes, contains many rare items in Americana, American and Engish first editions and many of the finest specimens of printing, from the Bruce Rogers, Mosher, Rudge, Nash and other presses.

Mrs. Meyer said that her husband spent nearly 50 years in assembling his library.

Hungary Jails 38 in Campaign On Reds, Nazis

Nationalist Move to Get Dictatorship, Moscow Plot Held Crushed.

By the Associated Press.

Budapest, Hungary, April 16.—Nazis and Communists felt the force of a two-fisted blow from the Hungarian government today.

A political police unit swept down on the home of Ference Szalasu and seized him and 24 others on charges of high treason.

Officers declared Szalasu had organized a widespread Nationalist movement, seeking to establish a dictatorship with a "100 per cent Nazi program." The government immediately ordered dissolution of the group.

Then the police arrested 13 men whom they accused of forming a "league for reactivating communism" in Hungary. The organization, a police announcement said, was directed from Moscow.

New Minister Acts.

The arrests of Szalasu and the 24 men accused as sub-leaders of his organization were ordered by the new minister of interior, Joseph Szell, as his first official act. Szell, called "iron-fisted," had just organized the political police.

The government had been investigating Szalasu's activities for several weeks in the belief he might be planning a Nazi putsch.

(Nazis in neighboring Austria staged a abortive putsch July 25, 1934, in which Austrian Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss was killed.)

Police who raided Szalasu's home said the arrests would end years of Nazi propaganda. They found a quantity of literature, money and forms used for swearing in new members of the organiaztion.

Gatherings Held.

Szalasu was alleged to have perfected a country-wide system, with councils of ten in villages and towns which held secret meetings.

Police said these gatherings were called "whisperings," and were under the leadership of a "banner-bearing squire."

Szalasu and all those arrested were subjected to intense questioning as authorities delved into alleged dictatorship objectives of the organization said to have been based on "God, peasant, citizen and soldier."

Szalasu resigned as a major in the army to head the organization, known as the "Nap."

Government authorities, in ordering dissolution, declared the organization endangered public safety and order. The action immediately stirred speculation of a possible large-scale drive against Nazis in Hungary.

Lottery Vote Proposed.

Columbus, Ohio, April 16 (AP).—Attorney General Herbert S. Duffy announced approval today ofsyuopsis of a proposed Constitutional amendment and law to legalize State lotteries. Both would be submitted to referendum at the November election and would become effective November 10, if approved,

Bob Burns Says

By Bob Burns.

I went to work for an uncle of mine down home one time who ran a grocery store and I had always heard that he was jest a little bit shady in his dealings, so the very first day when he told me to pack a barrel full of apples and git it ready for shipping, I asked him if he wanted me to put the big apples on the top.

He glared at me and said "Don't you ever dare do a trick like that as long as you're workin' for me!" He said, "You put the biggest apples on the bottom and the smallest ones on top."

I was so happy to find out he was honest and I was ashamed of myself for ever listenin' to those vile rumors about him. So when I finished packin' the barrel, I went to him and told him I was sorry that I said that and he says, "Well did'ja finish packin'?" And I said "Yes." He said, "Did'ja put the big apples on the bottom and the little ones on top?" I said "Yes, and I've done nailed the lid on." He says, "Well, now then, turn the barrel upside down and put a label on it 'This End Up.'"

All in a Day.

Mrs. Thelma Cooper, a messenger for the stenographic section of F. C. A., has gone seriously about the business of finding out how many miles there are in a messenger's day, a question that messengers have asked themselves for years when alone with their thoughts and messages . . . An interested group on the eighth floor provided her with a pedometer and Mrs. Cooper now reports: "Between 9 and 10 miles daily" . . . But now the front elevators have been out of commission and this has increased the mileage considerably and other miles are added in delivering specials before a dead-line . . . Comments Mrs. Cooper: "When I came all the way from Oregon to take a job with the F. C. A., I hoped to get on my feet . . . Literally speaking, wouldn't you say I have succeeded?"

Sometime ago, the Farm Credit Club brought to public attention the need of decks of cards by the veterans in Walter Reed Hospital . . . Cards were so few out there, that the veterans sometimes got along as best they could on split decks, it was said . . . As a result of the club's appeal, more than 125 packs of cards and 25 magazines have been donated and others will be sent to the hospital from time to time as these accumulate in room 338 of the F. C. A.

A good time was reported by all attending the Federal Trade Commission, "Fetracom," dance on Thursday night . . . The committee which made the event enjoyable consisted of Mrs. Genevieve G. Meehan, chairman; Mrs. Mary Ann Rippy, Mrs. Helen Drawbaugh, Leolyn Peterson, Lillian Geranium, Rice E. Schrimsher, Peter J. Dias, Mervin L. Ott, Gilbert Mooers, Jack Crittenden, Margaret Byrne and Jane Herrity.

At a recent N. F. F. E. meeting, Vice President Biller startled the audience by picturing the withdrawals of all the benefits secured by the N. F. F. E. and showing in dollars and cents what these would mean. In the instance of the position which he held with the Government he would have to return in cash to the Government—should these benefits be withdrawn—over $12,000.

At the same meeting, Secretary-Treasurer Gertrude M. McNally, reminded that the entrance salary for the women employes of the Bureau of Engraving and Printing had been more than tripled during the years of existence of the organization.

With view to improving durability of art works in the Government buildings, the advisory service of Alexander Abels, instructor in painting and painting technique, Art Students' League, New York, has been secured. Abels, in collaboration with Dr. Herbert Wollner, consulting chemist to the Secretary of the Treasury, and Edward Bruce, chief, procurement division, section of painting and sculpture, will work on standards of art technique for the various sections of the country. His work will be directed toward aiding artists commissioned for murals, frescoes and other decorations for Government buildings to utilize media that will last in the climate of the particular locality.

F. C. A. employes held a fire drill the other day and all cleared the building in nine minutes after the alarm was sounded. This did not better the previous time, but in this instance only the stairs were used. The results indicate an announcement said, that with slight change in routing to relieve congestion on the stairs, the building can be emptied without the use of elevators in eight minutes or less.

Milk-Price Study Again Demanded

Another demand for a thorough investigation of high milk prices here is being considered by Chairman King, of the Senate District Committee, he said yesterday.

The demand was made by Mrs. John Boyle, jr., chairman of the Washington Consumers Council. It followed the announcement of B. B Herrick, director of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, that the 14-cent price will be continued here after May 1.

This price was agreed to by the Agricultural Adjustment Administration last autumn as a temporary emergency measure, necessitated by the lack of pasturage and the high price of food. Experts contend the reasons for the price boost exist no longer.

D. C. Will Seek Million More For Idle Relief

Commissioners Will Press Demands for Added Fund Monday.

The Commissioners Monday will ask the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations for an additional $1,000,000 for local relief in 1938.

At the same time they are expected to press demands for the $130,000 previously asked as a deficiency appropriation for District relief during May and June.

It appeared probable yesterday that the Budget Bureau might reconsider its stand and approve at least $100,000 of the $130,000 wanted by the Commissioners for the relief of employables unable to get either private relief or Government work.

The relief item in the District budget for 1938 was cut by the House from $2,500,000 to $1,411,500. The Commissioners will attempt to restore most of this reduction.

Further information on the relief situation will be gathered by the Commissioners today.

Elwood Street, director of public welfare, also is about to launch an emergency survey of the whole relief problem. His report is due July 1.

George E. Allen, Commissioner who supervises relief, probably will lead the appeal to end suffering among the 3,000 families whose heads, all employables, have neither jobs nor direct dole available.

District Junior High Program Held 'Still Far Short of Goal'

Educator, After Survey, Stresses Weaknesses of System at First Session of Two-Day School Conference.

That the District's junior high schools program still is far short of its desired objectives was indicated last night by evidence presented by Dr. Thomas H. Briggs, professor of education at Columbia University, speaking before 1,000 persons at the first session of the Junior High School Conference in Langley Junior High.

Dr. Briggs referred to a set of questionnaires distributed to teachers in the District's junior high schools, 130 of which had been returned and studied by him. He found that the teachers themselves believe the junior high program has glaring faults.

Thirty-nine separate deficiencies were listed in the answers by the teachers. The questionnaires asked what teachers thought were the most serious deficiencies under the former, 8-year elementary school program, which had not been rectified by establishment of the present junior high system.

Among the evils which have not been rectified, teachers listed the following: Too much teacher-preparation in the upper grades, a large gap between grade school and high school which has not been eliminated, but rather increased to two gaps, between elementary and junior high, and between junior and senior high; the need for a improved and strengthened. He added, however, that the local education program showed that "Washington was far more intelligent than many other cities." He indi- six-year program for secondary school education.

The speaker interpreted these questionnaires to indicate either that the junior high school program be revalued by a different set of standards, or it be materially cated that expert redefinition of elementary and high school programs was necessary if the junior high program is to be completely successful.

"I bring you these facts," he concluded, "as a challenge to you to re-examine your plans and objectives."

Dr. Briggs was the principal speaker at the first general session of the two-day conference. Other speakers were Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools; Dr. C. O. Williams, of Pennsylvania State College; Dr. F. B. Gruen, of Catholic University, and Mrs. Marion Wade Doyle, president of the Board of Education. Fred M. Alexander, of Richmond, will be the principal speaker at today's session, talking on "The Junior High School: A Prospectus for the Future."

Traffic Secretary, Policeman Meet On Duty; To Wed

Eleanora Wall is secretary to Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer.

Policeman Adam Arney is assigned to the Traffic Division and during the tag rush was detailed to Van Duzer's office.

The answer was easy to guess even before it was announced yesterday.

They will be married in October.

Miss Wall has served as Van Duzer's secretary since the traffic director came to Washington more than six years ago.

After the wedding, she will continue to type traffic regulations and Policeman Arney will continue to enforce them.

Hebrew University Is Subject of Talk

Speaking before the Washington Hebrew Congregation last night at the Eighth Street Temple, Dr. Hugo Bergmann, rector of the Hebrew University of Palestine, termed the institution a logical link in the continuity of Jewish history.

The educator, author of a number of books on philosophy, pointed out that by imbuing its students with a consciousness of the Jewish past, the university was developing in them the spirit of Judaism. He referred to the fact that the associate rabbi of the temple, Rabbi Norman Gerstenfeld, had been a student of Hebrew University.

Located near Jerusalem, the university was dedicated in 1925. Today, Dr. Bergmann said, the classrooms are filled to capacity, largely because of the influx of students and professional men from Germany.

Dr. Bergmann was the guest of leaders of the United Jewish Appeal yesterday at a luncheon at the Ambassador Hotel. This afternoon he will address the Hadassah Chapter at a Sabbath celebration at the Sixth Street Synagogue.

Wanderbirds to Hike To Goose Creek, Va.

The hikers will meet at 1416 F street northwest at 9:30 a. m. Beverly F. Rogers will lead the hike, return from which will be made by woods trails on the old Leesburg pike.

Senate D.C. Group To Hold Hearings

The Senate District Committee will resume hearings at 2 p. m. today on the bill to establish a small claims branch of the municipal court.

The committee also may hold an executive session to decide what amendments, if any, to adopt on the juvenile court measure.

Among the witnesses scheduled for the hearing on the small claims court bill are George E. Sullivan, attorney, and William A. Roberts, former people's counsel and now a presiding judge of a small claims court in New York City.

Quezon Will Get GeorgetownDegree

Georgetown University will bestow Founders' Day honors upon Manuel L. Quezon, first President of the Commonwealth of the Philippines, at a special convocation tonight at 8:30 o'clock in Gaston Hall.

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., will confer a degree of doctor of laws on President Quezon, who made a hurried return to Washington from a visit in Mexico to attend the ceremony.

Goodwill Donations $21,881 for 4 Days

Ernest H. Daniel, general chairman of Goodwill Industries campaign for $65,000, presided at the first report meeting of committee chairmen and workers held yesterday afternoon at the Willard Hotel. Contributions in the first four days of the campaign totaled $21,881.65.

The Right Rev. James E. Freeman, in sending his contribution to Goodwill, wrote the following letter which was read at the meeting: "I am confident that the Goodwill Industries is rendering an indispensable service here in Washington. It enables those who are handicapped or physically afflicted to be employed at a gainful occupation The service Goodwill Industries renders is altogether unique and, in my judgment, indispensable."

Inspectors, Tiring Of Using Trolleys, Want Autos Back

District building inspectors won't walk or ride the common carriers to their jobs if an appeal made yesterday by Capt. Hugh P. Oram, inspection director, is successful.

Capt. Oram asked Engineer Commissioner Dan Sultan to seek restoration in the 1938 appropriation bill of a $7,920 allowance for use of private automobiles.

The allowance for inspectors' use of private cars was eliminated by the Budget Bureau five years ago.

Since that economy slash, increase in traveling has boosted operating costs until inspectors no longer feel justified in bearing the expense, it was said by John W. Oehmann, inspector of buildings.

Oram pointed out that the present operations budget allows only $150 for purchase of street car tokens. He said that it would require $1,500 a year to give the 22 inspectors unprovided with transportation street car passes.

Annapolis Quota Increase Sought

The District Commissioners yesterday asked Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, to sponsor an amendment to the Walsh bill for increasing the District's quota at the United States Naval Academy.

They asked the residential requirement of five years be stricken and that the District be placed on a par with the States in this respect. This would mean that the appointees must be bona fide residents but without any limit on the residence.

King earlier in the week blocked passage of the bill on the ground he wanted to study it. The measure was reported out by the Naval Affairs Committee.

Social Work Aid by Police Urged Here

Women's Bureau Head Lashes Welfare Group for 'Distrust.'

Patrolmen Know Needs of People, She Tells D. C.-Md. Parley.

The cream of the social service workers of Washington and Maryland yesterday received a tongue lashing from the Capital's No. 1 policewoman, who pointed out their faults and told how they should be corrected.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, head of the Woman's Bureau, cited instances in which social workers had ignored police reports of families in need of their aid. She charged them with overlooking the sociological importance of the patrolman, who comes into daily contact with groups and individuals who should be receiving the service they have to offer.

She chided them for "distrusting" the police officer and refusing to take him—or her—into their confidence, despite the policeman's potential value as an aid in relieving human misery.

Asks Co-operation.

The college-trained captain's address was one of the features of the joint conference of the Washington Council of Social Agencies and Maryland State Conference of Social Work, which is being held at the Wardman Park Hotel. Nearly 400 delegates are registered for the meeting, which ends today.

Capt. Milliken urged the social workers to co-operate with policemen in their communities, encouraging them to play a part in welfare work and taking them into their confidence.

Paul T. Beisser, of Baltimore, voiced the opinion that Miss Milliken was too harsh on the profession, but conceded the need of improved co-operation and co-ordination of services.

"Today's welfare measures are tomorrow's insurance against the further spread of want and dependency, delinquency and crime," the delegates were told by Jane M. Hoey, public assistance director of the Social Security Board.

Not Just Handouts.

"Social security is not just a matter of handing out money to worthy public causes and needy individuals," she said. "Rather it is a service program."

Neither the social security act nor any other act of Government can guarantee security to anyone, Miss Hoey declared.

H. S. Callowhill, director of the Playground Athletic League of Baltimore, discussed the value of properly administered play to the child.

Other speakers yesterday included Dr. Thomas Gosling, of the American Red Cross, who discussed the growth of neighborhood councils throughout the country; C. Marshall Finnan, District parks superintendent, who summarized the talks on recreation; Miss Joanna Colcord, Russell Sage Foundation; Dr. Marian Hathaway, University of Pittsburgh; Jacob Fisher, associate editor of "Social Work Today," and David Cushman Coyle, Washington author.

P. U. C. Will Study Street Car Safety

Public Utilities Commission Chairman Riley E. Elgen yesterday ordered an investigation to learn whether unsafe street cars are being operated in Washington.

His action came after William McK. Clayton, spurred by news of the accident that injured 27 persons, had charged at the Capital Transit Co. evaluation hearing Thursday that between 150 and 200 unsafe street cars are being operated in Washington. Clayton, who is chairman of the Federation of Citizens Associations public utilities committee, demanded an inquiry.

Elgen declared yesterday that if any cars were found to be unsafe the commission would immediately order them out of service.

Liquor Store Held Up.

Two colored bandits last night entered a liquor store in the 1400 block of Ninth street northwest, fired a warning shot at Leonard Freedman and Arthur Yuter, clerks, and escaped with $55 from the cash register. Several customers were forced to stand against the wall as they entered the store.

Vagrant Held In One-Man Crime Wave

Admits Robberies Here and Tells of Kidnaping Woman.

Confession of half a dozen automobile thefts, housebreaking and other crimes was made yesterday by Raymond S. Sutton, 34-year-old Philadelphia hoodlum, arrested here last Tuesday night.

Sutton is being held pending action of Philadelphia authorities, who believe he is an escaped convice, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, said last night.

He was picked up for investigation when it was observed the numbers on the front of his car and those on the rear license plate did not correspond. He admitted the car was stolen property just before making his confession.

Thompson said Sutton told how he had met a woman he knew in Philadelphia and forced her at pistol point to accompany him to Wilmington, where they registered at a hotel. He then related how he had gone out in search of an automobile, adding he entered a sales company and drove a car out. When he found it was in need of repairs, he said, he abandoned it, returned to the same establishment and drove off with another.

He and the woman then left Wilmington, he asserted, and when he stopped the automobile on the roadside, she drove away in it, stranding him. Later he learned she had been arrested outside of Wilmington. He raised money for her defense, he said.

Sutton admitted several drug store robberies and housebreakings.

He was captured here after a chase which ended when his automobile smashed into a fence at Fifth and F streets northwest. At the time of his arrest he drew a gun, police said, but did not use it.

Phelps Urges 'Decent Wages' For Clean-up

Unemployed Entitled to Fair Play, Car Fare, Meals, He Says.

In connection with the proposal of The Washington Post that the District's unemployed be used for work during Clean-Up Week, Monday through April 30, Canon Anson Phelps Stokes, chairman of the citizens committee on unemployment yesterday urged that such service "be paid for at a decent wage."

"I find that various employment agencies, including the District Employment Center, are constantly receiving 'help wanted' requests or offers of employment that are not fair to the unemployed," asserted Dr. Stokes.

"Some people offer 15 or 20 cents an hour without car fare or meals, and think it is strange that their offers are not accepted with alacrity.

"It seems to me that when we employ the unemployed we should be willing to pay a minimum—plus car fare and lunch—of 25 cents an hour for cleaning women, and of from 40 to 50 cents an hour for unskilled laborers.

"May I call attention to the fact that the Employment Center at 480 Indiana avenue has a large number of colored maids in its list who can be secured for $6 up a week, plus car fare and meals, the exact amount being dependent upon competence and experience.

"It can also supply competent typists and stenographers, as well as men and women for other positions in the business and professional world.

"The Center has an adequate work record of every man and woman on its lists and can be relied upon to provide good services."

20-Ton Bomber Will Be Tested

Exhaustive tests on the Army's latest monster of the skies, a 20-ton, four-engined Boeing bomber, will be started immediately at the Boeing factory in Seattle, the War Department announced yesterday.

After two weeks of tests on the West Coast the giant plane will be flown to Wright Field, Dayton, Ohio, where it again will be tested, this time for engineering and tactical performances. If the tests are satisfactory, it was indicated that it may visit Bolling Field in the next few months.

9 Hospitals Ask $120,000 To Help Poor

Charity Work Menaced as Deficits Increase at Institutions.

Community Chest Unable to Meet Payments in Full.

This concludes a series of articles on the plight of Washington's nine united hospitals now issuing an emergency appeal for financial aid.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

Nine red-rimmed thermometers, drawn on a white sheet of paper, tell the story of the most pressing hospital emergency in Washington's history. These illustrate the shortage on payments by the Community Chest, and show how deficits, accumulating for more than a year, have continued to climb steadily since the beginning of 1937.

Every one of the nine institutions issuing an appeal for help plays a significant part in the charitable work of Washington. Even when the full Community Chest rate can be paid for needy patients, the hospital loses money on this service. When only a part of the quota can be paid, deficits mount to a point where something must be done if these institutions are to continue to function as part of the city's defense against spread of disease.

In a recent month the Episcopal Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, 1147 Fifteenth street, provided 800 days' service for part-pay and non-pay patients in its in-patient department and 2,125 visits in its out-patient division.

Collect 69 Per Cent.

The total amount charged to the Community Chest for this was $2,538. Only 69 per cent of this bill could be settled. The hospital lost $1,200 on its service dispensed to needy Washington residents on that one account.

The story is much the same with other institutions now appealing for aid. In February, for example, Georgetown University Hospital suffered a $1,264 shortage on Chest payments. During the same month, Emergency and George Washington Univtrsity hospitals were paid only 69 per cent of the bill each presented to the Chest, while Homeopathic Hospital received a fraction more than 70 per cent of its charge to the Chest.

Each of these institutions has an active out-patient department that has continued to function at full speed despite the mounting deficit. Each has an emergency division that has opened its doors alike to the rich and poor before questions were asked as to whether the bill could be settled. Not one of these nine institutions has refused to take a patient sent to them by the Central Admitting Bureau, although it has been understood for some time that the Chest could not afford to pay the full rate of $4 a day for service.

While in most cases the biggest part of the burden has fallen upon hospitals which can least afford the load, charity work has continued in all of Washington's private hospitals through the two years when the Chest failed to raise its quota and the full cost for community patients could not be borne by the community agency.

During this time none of these hospitals has been able adequately to make needed improvements in facilities beyond a "bare bones" point. In order to keep up the good work of shouldering the leftover expense for hospitalization and dispensary service for needy Washington residents, these institutions have been forced to go deeper into debt.

Now, with credit stretched to the breaking point and with the realization that unless something is done at once to alleviate the distressing situation, they may be forced to curtail or entirely discontinue their charity program, these hospitals are appealing to Washington residents for financial aid. At least $120,000 must be raised by the first of May if the service to needy residents is to continue in the future as it has been carried on in the past.

To this end a "Crusade for Health"—an emergency appeal of united hospitals, has established headquarters at the Mayflower hotel and will receive contributions there through May 1.

The Deep Affection for the Base Hit

By Shirley Povich.

POVICH.

This department, after batting around big league press boxes for a dozen years, is constrained to believe that if there is anything a big league ball player cherishes more than a base hit, it is a two-base hit, a three-base hit or a home run.

They love their base hits, not for the pure joy of socking a ball into unprotected territory and the satisfaction of their vanity, but for reasons more practical. Club owners pay off on batting averages and next year's contract is directly affected by a hitting slump or a .300 average, as the case may be.

Even in these exhibition games they like their base hits. In them they find reassurance that their batting eyes are keen with the promise of a successful season at bat to come. Always the hitters are levelling.

* * * *

Are We Hot Stuff?

And so it was, yesterday, at Griffith Stadium, as a couple of kid pitchers from Georgetown University were turning the Nats back with four hits for nine innings, that mutterings were heard on the Washington bench. The Nats didn't like it and they were squawking.

* * * *

"Griffith ought to be shot for scheduling games like this," they alibied with words to that effect. "That kind of pitching we're facing isn't even good batting practice. It throws us off stride, we don't know what's coming up to the plate and we don't know whether to swing or duck."

* * * *

But, lest my Georgetown friends, Nicketakis and Mike Petroskey, who turned in that neat little four-hit job against the big leaguers, take the Nats' remarks to heart, I must hurriedly observe that big league ball players are that way.

* * * *

They're Like That!

No greater alibi artist than the big leaguer who fails to get a hit ever existed. They hold nothing but contempt for the pitcher who holds 'em hitless and have nothing but praise for the guy they can hit.

* * * *

Had the Washington club belted Nicketakis and Petroskey all over the premises at Griffith Stadium yesterday the chances are that the Nats after the game would have remarked unanimously:

"Pretty good stuff those two kids had today. Yes, sir, they are a couple of pretty fair pitchers."

* * * *

Similarly, there are big league pitchers who hate to admit their shortcomings. Buck Newsom always has a stock alibi whenever some batter pounds one of his pitches for a game-winning hit.

* * * *

"I had plenty of stuff on that pitch," Newsom will say. "That guy's just a great hitter, that's all."

The intended implication being, of course, that the guy had to be a great hitter to get a hit off the great Newsom when the great Newsom was bearing down.

* * * *

Shy Little Violets

And the hitters, too, are slow to confess that they have achieved anything extraordinary when they make a particularly gratifying hit. They prefer to regard a swell sock in the pinch as something just routine with 'em and not at all extraordinary.

I have Goose Goslin particularly in mind. It was after a game in Boston when this department was dining with Goslin that, by way of making conversation, I remarked about the length of Goslin's game-winning home run that afternoon.

* * * *

It was a tremendous sock. A screaming line drive that shrieked over the infield and was still ascending when it collided with the centerfield seats at Fenway Park. The Goose had never hit a longer ball in his life, and few ball players had.

"Yeah, that was a fair hit," replied Goslin, "but ya know, I wish I had really gotten a-hold of that ball."

* * * *

Honest, that's what he said.

Whenever the playing days of Jess Hill end, that swishing sound you'll be hearing from the direction of Griffith Stadium won't be every air brake in the city suddenly giving way. It'll be Ed Linke's sigh of relief.

Hill's bat has been haunting Linke for the past two years. At Yankee Stadium, in 1935, Hill bounced one of Linke's pitches off Linke's forehead and knocked him cold. Last spring, at Orlando, Hill all but tore Linke's shoulder loose with another line drive back to the pitcher's box. Yesterday, at Griffith Stadium, Hill lowered his aim and knocked Linke off his feet in batting practice with a line drive that collided with Linke's left shin and sent the pitcher to the Nats' infirmary for the rest of the day.

Norfolk Club Quits 'Money Seeking' AAU

'Organization Is Interested Only in Proceeds,' Says Club President.

By the Associated Press.

Norfolk, Va., April 16.—James E. Old, jr., president of the Norfolk Athletic Club, announced today the intention of his organization to withdraw from the Virginia Association of the A. A. U.

Old said that "our dealing with State A. A. U. officials have led us to believe that they are interested in promoting sports events only for financial reasons and not for the betterment of sports and sports activities."

Old, who is assistant principal of Blair Junior High School here, said "we are satisfied that the A. A. U. is interested only in financial proceeds. The Norfolk A. C. does not care to have any more to do with them."

Old's announcement, it is believed, will bring to an end negotiations to stage a State-wide A. A. U. track and field carnival in the new stadium of the Norfolk division of the College of William and Mary. The meet was to have been sponsored by the Norfolk A. C., which sponsored the State A. A. U. basketball tournament this winter.

The board of directors of the Norfolk A. C. includes a number of prominent Virginians, including State Senator Vivian Page and Dean W. T. Hodges, of the Norfolk division of William and Mary.

Eastern Upsets Tech, 5 to 0, With Five Hits

Lefty Stockwell Also Fans 10 in Shackling Favored Foes; Gets Able Support; O'Brien Leads Victors' Attack With Homer, Single.

By John R. Vosburgh.

The return of Coach Charles Mayo Guyon to inter-high sports was duly celebrated at Eastern High yesterday where the rotund Indian watched his Eastern ball team upset Tech, 5 to 0.

Chief Guyon brought out a big left-hander named Walter Stockwell who set the Techmen back with five hits and ten strikeouts. Meanwhile, Eastern was demonstrating a new-found punch at the plate which nicked eight hits off the right-hand delivery of husky, 190-pound James (Buddy) Webb, Tech pitcher.

It was Coach Guyon's first appearance in the interhigh picture in a year. His health, which caused his enforced winter's absence, took a sharp turn for the better in the second inning when big Everett O'Brien, his centerfielder, connected with one of Webb's fast ones for a home run to leftfield, scoring Stockwell, who had led off the inning with a single.

With these two runs under his belt, Stockwell proceeded to dispose of the Northeasters with sparkling assistance from his fast-fielding teammates. Committing five errors to Eastern's one, Tech contributed markedly to its own downfall. A poor throw by Roy Lemerise in the seventh on Al Kidwell's grounder, a passed ball by Jim Wise, a single by Lee Lusby, which hit a glove in centerfield, brought Kidwell to third and he scored when Centerfielder Joe Ciomei threw badly to second on the same play.

This same Kendall had been doing contortions all afternoon to save his fellow infielders from erring, but Tech's efforts at the plate were less effective.

A fast throw by Al Kidwell cut off one Tech run in the first inning, catching Joe Ciomei at the plate by a scant margin. Stockwell, well stocked with a curve and sinker, walked Lemerise in the third and then fanned the next three men.

Ciomei's double in the sixth and Gordon's sacrifice produced another Tech threat, but Kendall popped to Lusby and Fillah grounded to Kidwell. This same Kidwell, all-high quarterback, killed another Tech rally in the seventh.

Walton Merchant and Leroy Curtis had singled in succession and advanced on a neat bunt by Wise. Along came Lemerise and lifted a baffling fly to deep short. Kidwell made a great catch and doubled the bewildered Merchant off third to stifle Tech's biggest threat.

Gordon rapped out a single in the eighth with two out, but Stockwell fanned Kendall and set Tech back in one-two-three order in the ninth, two of them by strike-outs.

Terps Clout Wolverines In 16-6 Rout

Gee's Wildness Boosts Score; Peckinpaugh's Son Gets Homer.

Maryland blasted out enough hits off two Michigan pitchers to win most any ball game at College Park yesterday, but it took a fourth-inning streak of wildness by John Gee to give the Terps a 16-6 verdict.

Gee, a 6-foot, 9-inch giant, was touched for nine hits during his 3-inning stay on the mound and was behind 6 to 4, when he was banished. The Terrapins filled the bases and Gee forced in three runs to give the Marylanders a lead they never relinquished.

Charles McHugh relieved Gee and was nicked for a brace of runs before the side was reetired, running old total for this frame to seven. McHugh halted the Shipley men over the rest of the route, allowing but 5 hits in the six inning term he worked.

Moe Egan was the hero of Maryland's early attack against Gee, driving in two runners with a single in the second and duplicating the feat with a hot smash to center two innings later.

Michigan was kept in the running by the home run bats of Walt Peckinpaugh and Don Brewer. Each cracked out a round-tripper with a mate on base. Peckinpaugh, son of Roger Peckinpaugh, former Washington shortstop, led the Wolverines at bat with a home run and three singles in five attempts.

This was the first defeat of the season for the Michigan team, who meet the Navy nine today at Annapolis.

Lunn Gains Finals In Mason-Dixon

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., April 16 (AP).—Al Marshall, of Cincinnati, and Richard D. Lunn, of Washington, won today in the semi-finals of the Mason-Dixon amateur golf tourney.

Marshall, in an upset, defeated John C. Davison, of Long Meadow, Mass., on the eighteenth.

Davison conceded Marshall a 3-inch putt on the last green. His own putt was 3 feet from the pin, and he had already gone down 1 on the hole. The match ended with Marshall 1 up.

Lunn turned back Maj. T. A. Harris, of Lewisburg, W. Va., with a medal score of 74. The major turned in 76.

Marshall and Lunn will play in the finals tomorrow. Lunn is a slight favorite because of his longer experience as a golfer. Marshall has played only four years.

Newsom Slated to Get Opener Assignment

Manager Bucky Harris yesterday tipped his hand in the matter of the Nats' opening game pitcher when he designated Jimmy DeShong for duty against the Baltimore Orioles today.

Harris' opening game selection now appears to be Buck Newsom. Pete Appleton, another leading candidate, pitched yesterday against Georgetown University and thus would not be ready for a Monday assignment and DeShong's duties today remove him from consideration.

Harris' choice now lies between Newsom and Joe Cascarella, with the former a heavy favorite to win the assignment.

Girl, 15, Wins National 220 Swim Title

Miss Rawls and Halina Tomski Upset in a Long-Argued Finish.

By the United Press.

Chicago, April 16.—Virginia Hopkins, 15, Miami Beach, Fla., upset a brilliant swimming field in the National A. A. U. women's 220-yard free-style event tonight and scored a disputed victory that took finish judges a quarter of an hour to decide.

Halina Tomski, of the Detroit Athletic Club, was second; Claudia Eckert, of Wilmette, Ill., was third, and Doris Brennan, Providence, R. I., was fourth. The new champion's time was 2:37.6.

Miss Hopkins, supposedly overshadowed in the 220 by her trim teammate, Katherine Rawls, finished almost in a dead heat with Miss Tomski and Miss Eckert, and deprived Miss Rawls of her twenty-third United States title.

After a heated conference, the slim Florida star was declared the new champion. It was her first national title.

The winner's time was 3.37.4, more than 7 seconds slower than the mark set by the New York Club last year.

Adolph Kiefer, Chicago, a freshman at the University of Texas, bettered his ninth and tenth world backstroke record in three nights' swimming against time in an exhibition.

Racing through a 60-foot course, Kiefer cut 25.3 seconds off the listed mark for 500 yards and more than a minute off the 880-yard record set by Paul Grossman, of Cleveland, in 1935. His respective times were 6:14.5 and 11:02.4

The husky Lake Shore Athletic Club star lowered eight other marks the first two nights of the women's meet.

The Washington Athletic Club of Seattle captured the A. A. U. 300-yard medley relay title with a nose victory over the defending champion Women's Swimming Association of New York. The Lake Shore A. C., of Chicago, was third and Miami Beach Swimming Club fourth.

The University of Michigan 150-yard medley relay team of Tom Haynie, Jack Kasley and Ed Kirar, bettered an American record by defeating the Lake Shore A. C., in 1:20.6. The listed record is 1:21.8 by Princeton University in 1936.

Ahearn After Baer To Fight Gallagher

Matchmaker Goldie (I Lose Money) Ahearn yesterday decided he had found a way he had nothing to lose, so he cabled Max Baer an offer to meet Marty Gallagher.

"Can offer Baer 35 percent to box Gallagher in July at the Stadium," cabled Ahearn to London.

Since Baer has announced his retirement from the ring, since he has consistently refused to box Gallagher for better offers and since he could get more money for easier fights, it is improbable that Maxie will accept the offer.

Ahearn has Marty Gallagher fighting Sandy McDonald at Turner's Arena next Monday night. While he can't lost anything by the offer to Baer, he can gain something—a bit of publicity for his next show.

2-Run Rally Offsets Foe's Circuit Clout

Ray Brennen's Single Is Deciding Factor; Bill Lanier Is Star.

Answering the foe's challenge with a two-run blast in the last half of the eleventh inning, George Washington yesterday erased Western Maryland's 5-to-4 advantage and emerged a 6-to-5 winner in their thrilling duel on the East Ellipse. It was the Colonials' second straight victory.

Max Bishop, former Philadelphia A's second baseman and now a scout for that club, was among the spectators, come expressly for a glimpse at "Mac" McQuillian, Western Maryland's big leftfielder. Whatever big league ambitions the Terror flyhawk entertains may have been rudely jolted by his performance, for he fell down miserably at the plate although handling eight chances flawlessly afield.

George Washington assumed a 2-to-0 lead in the first five innings, only to have the Westminster whackers rub it out with a 3-run uprising in the sixth. The Terrors added another marker to their side of the ledger in the eighth, but their hosts counted twice, tying the score at 4-all.

"Sunshine" Campbell, Western Maryland's burly three-sports star, apparently won the game for his mates in the initial half of the eleventh, banging a lusty home run to the farthest recesses of left-centerfield, but George Washington's never-say-die spirit manifested itself in the final half of the frame.

Vince De Angelis, always a dependable man in a pinch, opened the inning with a clean single to center and promptly stole second. Edmonston laid down a sacrifice bunt so neatly both runners were safe. Stapleton grounded out without any material benefit before Brennen poked a long single into centerfield. De Angelis scored in a walk and Edmondston also made it when Byrd fumbled the relay from the outfield.

As the deadline draws near for the closing of entries in the eighth annual dog show of the National Capital Kennel Club, May 1, at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, indications are the show will be the largest in history, J. A. Honsick, club secretary, announced yesterday.

Honsick also announced that Capt. Will Judy, editor of the magazine, Dog World, and one of the outstanding authorities on dogs in the United States, will attend the show.

An elaborate list of cash prizes, ribbons and merchandise has been collected, Honsick said. Prominent judges who will officiate at the show included Mrs. A. R. Moffit, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y.; Col. M. Robert Guggenheim, Oliver C. Harriman and Richard Quigley, of Lock Haven, Pa.

Cubs Jolted as Carleton Is Lost for a Month

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—The pennant hopes of Chicago's Cubs were jolted late today when Dr. John F. Davis, club physician, said Pitcher Tex Carleton probably will not be able to play for at least a month.

Carleton, a regular, complained of a sore arm after working against the Sox April 4. An X-ray examination today. Dr Davis said, showed a chipped bone in the pitcher's right elbow and he advised that the arm be placed in a cast for two weeks.

Hill-Toppers Get 3 Blows Off Appleton

3 Walks, 2 Passed Balls, Hit Batter, Give Nats 3 Runs in Third.

By Shirley Povich.

Georgetown had the old college spirit and the good wishes of 1,500 fans at Griffith Stadium yesterday, but Mr. Clark C. Griffith's hired mercenaries had a three-hit pitcher in Old Pete Appleton, and the Nats won the ball game, 7 to 0.

At that, the Nats had little to boast about except Appleton and the final score. Still in the throes of their woeful hitting slump, they collected only four hits off a pair of Georgetown pitchers.

The ball game exploded in the face of Nick Nicketakis, an erratic left-hander, after he had pitched a pair of hitless innings at the Nats and conjured visions of a sweet upset among Georgetown lads in the stands.

In that third inning, Griffith's athleles accepted four runs from Nicketakis, who succeeded in keeping his pitches in the park, but otherwise was no success. He gave up only one hit to the Nats during the inning, but there was a little matter of three bases on balls, a hit batsman and two passed balls by Catcher Keegin that undermined the collegians' hopes.

All Hits Are Doubles.

Griffith's athletes were hitting with very little vigor against Nicketakis and Mike Petroskey, a big right-hander, but they were hitting with great good judgment. All four of the Nats' socks were two-base hits and all were nicely timed, with men on bases. A pair of doubles of Al Simmons' bat accounted for three of the Nats' runs.

Against Appleton, a University of Michigan alumnus who has been batting around the big leagues for ten years, the Hilltop undergrads were pitifully impotent. Old Pete was breaking off his hooks in the most deceptive manner and not until the ninth did Georgetown reach him for a legitimate hit—Harry Bassin's major league two-bagger to right field.

They didn't get a hit off Pete for four innings and by that time the Nats had a 4-0 lead, amassed in that wild third inning when Nicketakis walked Millies, hit Chapman on the elbow, and then walked Lewis and Kuhel to force the first run across the plate. Two more clattered across when Simmons slammed a double to deep left and the fourth eventually scored while Tommy Keating was in the act of throwing out Johnny Stone.

The Nats made it 5-0 in the fifth when Simmons slammed another double off Third Baseman Cavadine's shins after Lewis had drawn a walk and then made it 7-0 in the next inning with their third and fourth hits of the ball game—doubles to left by Travis and Chapman which sandwiched a base on balls to Myer.

Hitless for four innings, Georgetown nicked Appleton for a pair of cheap safeties in the fifth when Keegin beat out a hit to Travis and Bodine dropped a looping single in short center, but in this emergency Appleton fanned Nicketakis and disposed of Nolan on a grounder to Lewis.

Georgetown was finding things very, very futile.

Sunned Wins Graw Feature, Camera Gives War Emblem Place

Dashing Doe Pays $52.30 In 4th Race

Hunting Home Beats 1-2 Choice in Opener to Return $18.80.

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Havre de Grace, Md., April 16.—Sunned, a useful son of Ed Crump, turned in his first victory of the 1937 season this afternoon in the Hampton Roads Purse, a sprint of 6 furlongs, which drew seven better-than-average horses of assorted ages and sexes. The 5-year-old gelding, second to Aneroid at Bowie, drove to the imaginary wire a length in advance of a photo finish for second money, in which the Glen Riddle Farm's War Emblem was given the call over the Bomar Stable's Billy Bee.

Racing in the Blue and Gold colors of Mrs. B. F. Christmas, of Upper Marlboro, Md., Sunned provided his backers with an $8.80 mutuel. The rather unfashionable Jockey J. Haritos had the mount and he rode a creditable race.

The event was conducted over a fast track and under a clear sky, although a cold wind drove in off adjacent Susquehanna River. Some 8,000 regular and occasional turf fans took part in the day's sport.

Trouble for Kurtsinger.

The field came out of the starting stalls in a bunch and it was not until nearing the quarter pole that Turkey Run was established as a definite leader. War Emblem was second, Black Highbrow third and Sunned fourth. Jockey Kurtsinger ran into trouble with the favored Sir Quest and was forced to take back.

Approaching the stretch, Sunned went up to press the pace of Turkey Run as War Emblem, in tight quarters along the rail, dropped back slightly. In the stretch, Sunned took command as Turkey Run faded out of the picture. War Emblem moved up again and Billy Bee and Sir Quest came charging up on the outside.

Sunned was not to be denied but War Emblem, Billy Bee and Sir Quest all stretched for the wire at the same time behind him.

The winner was clocked at 1:14 2-5.

The defeat of a 1-to-2 shot marked the opener when Grim Reaper, flying the colors of John Hay Whitney, finished fourth in a dash of eight juveniles which saw Hunting Home, an $18.80 betting proposition, win by two lengths from Sudanese, half of the W. M. Jeffords entry. Yomer was third at the end of the 4½ furlongs. The son of Time Maker, representing Mrs. M. Nelson Bond, was clocked in 54 2-5.

Dunnamany, carrying the silks of G. L. Stryker, took the second event in an easy fashion, winning from White Hot by four lengths. Rewarding his backers by an $8.30 mutuel, Dunnamany ran the 6 furlongs in 1:14 2-5. Fyan, the favorite, led the field for 3 furlongs and then weakened.

Dashing Doe Pays $52.

Three-year-old fillies vied in the third race and Buddy Hirsch's Jinx proved the winner, leading from flagfall to finish to have a margin of three parts of a length on Mrs. E. Denemark's Goldspray at the finish. Trauwina, prominent all the way, was third. Hubert LeBlanc rode the winner, which operated in the role of a $5.50 favorite. The daughter of Boatswain was clocked in 1:15 for the 6 furlongs.

A major upset marked the running of the fourth race when Dashing Doe, a daughter of Distraction, defeated nine 3-year-old fillies over the 6-furlong course. With Apprentice Jockey Eccard in the saddle, Dashing Doe wrestled the pace-making honors from True Tune and then went on to win by two and one-half lengths. True Tune managed to hang on to second money a length and a half ahead of Touche. Dashing Doe, in the colors of J. E. Hughes, of Chicago, returned a $52.30 mutuel, while running the sprint route in 1:14.

Merry Maker, Kentucky Derby candidate, scored an easy victory in the sixth race, a test of a mile and 70 yards. With Charlie Kurtsinger in the saddle, Merry Maker went to the front nearing the far turn and was taken in hand after opening a good lead to win by five lengths.

Colorado Ace Leading Field In Decathlon

But Kearns Is Not Near Morris' Mark in 1st 5 Kansas Events.

By the Associated Press.

Lawrence, Kans., April 16.—Another Colorado decathalon star emerged today at the Kansas relays as the probable 1937 occupant of retiring champion Glenn Morris' shoes—but he fell far short of filling them.

Dick Kearns, University of Colorado hurdler, jumped into the lead for the first five events of the ten-event program, but his 3,575-point total indicated Morris' record-breaking mark of 7,576 points for the strenuous ten-event test would not be periled.

Morris, also from Colorado, had 4,115 points at the end of the first day's program last year.

The remaining five events will be run off tomorrow morning as the curtain raiser to the relays proper, which feature a special mile race between Glenn Cunningham and his most persistent rival, Archie San Romani, of Emporia (Kans.) State Teachers College.

Kearns turned in best performance in only one event, the shotput, but in the other four he was near the top.

Iowa Defeats Chicago, 8-1, in Big Ten Debut

Chicago, April 16 (AP).—Iowa's baseball team opened the Big Ten season today with an 8-to-1 victory over the University of Chicago.

The Hawkeyes scored a run in the first and then shoved over four more in the second inning on three hits, a base on balls and a Maroon error. Halton led the Iowa attack with three hits. Hinrichs, with a nice change of pace and a curve ball which the Maroons could not solve, allowed Chicago but four hits.

Athletics Buy Veteran Rothrock From Reds

Philadelphia, April 16 (AP).—The Athletics purchased the veteran outfielder, Jack Rothrock, from the Cincinnati Reds for an undisclosed amount of cash, Roy Mack, vice president, announced tonight.

Rothrock was traded to the Reds by the Rochester Red Wings last fall. He formerly played with the St. Louis Cardinals.

Season Opens At Keeneland Track Today

$2,500 Added Handicap Is Feature of Kentucky Turf Inaugural.

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Ky., April 16.—"Boots and saddle" calling a field of 2-year-olds to the post tomorrow afternoon at Keeneland Race Course will usher in Kentucky's spring racing season.

Keenland officials predict a record crowd will mark the return of spring racing to Lexington for the first time since 1933, when the old Kentucky Association track held its last meet.

A coludy day was forecast for the inaugural, which will be featured by the running of the $2,500 added Phoenix Handicap for 3-year-olds and up at 6 furlongs.

Following the 11-day meet at Keeneland, Churchill Downs will open a 10-day spring program and Latonia will follow with the 37-day meet starting May 29.

The high point of the Keeneland meet will be the running of the $5,000 added Blue Grass Stakes for 3-year-olds over a mile and one-eighth route April 29. Two other stake races are planned.

Keeneland, which was opened last fall with a short meeting, is located in the heart of the famous Blue Grass region and surrounded by the farms of leading turfmen of the country, including Col. E. R. Bradley, Hal Price Headley, Warren Wright, C. V. Whitney, Charles T. Fisher, J. E. Widener and others.

Many winter favorites have been shipped here for the meet and will be taken later to Churchill Downs at Louisville.

Roosevelt Homer Beats W. & L.,16-15

Baltimore Foe of Nats Here, DeShong to Pitch

Baltimore' ambitious Orioles, who have been spending freely for talent, will provide the opposition for the Nats today in the Washington Club's final Griffith Stadium appearance before the opening game Monday.

The Orioles bought Pitchers Dusty Rhodes and Harry Matuzak from the Athletics and big Ed Remorenko, whom they have converted from a first baseman into an outfielder, from the Trenton Club. Preseason predictions favor Baltimore to win the International League pennant.

Manager Bucky Harris will send Jimmy DeShong to the mound against the Baltimore Club.

Prophet Jack Garner Sees High Roost for Nats This Year

Word spread today that "Cactus Jack" Garner thinks the Washington Senators look "purty good" and will finish higher than their fourth position of 1936.

To baseball followers elsewhere this may be just another opinion. But to Capital enthusiasts, who've kept check on the success of the Vice President in judging baseball flesh, it's a smart tip.

They recalled that a year ago, when the experts were dusting off sixth place for the Senators, Garner forecast a first-division berth.

Friends said the white-haired Texan, who hasn't missed an opening game since 1904, looks for Clark Griffith's team to be a real factor in the American League pennant race.

President Roosevelt will throw out the first ball Monday when the Senators meet Philadelphia in baseball's inaugural and, according to Griffith, "the best Vice President we ever had will hoist the flag in centerfield."

The President yesterday was presented passes to both major leagues. Garner, who is even more of a baseball enthusiast than Mr. Roosevelt, has similar gold-bordered American and National League passes, and also one that admits him to every minor league park in the Nation.

Garner has been a baseball "bug" since boyhood days. Whenever it looks like a quiet day in the Senate he beckons some senators and slips out to Griffith Stadium. Garner used to play shortstop for the Blossom (Texas) White Sox. It's said he was a nifty "traveler" on the basepaths and, although he never hit 'em very far, seldom struck out.

Mr. Garner plans to take Senators Robinson, of Arkansas; McNary of Oregon, and Johnson, of California, with him Monday. It was explained that he took a pair of Republicans, McNary and Johnson, to balance off the Democratic team of Garner and Robinson.

13 Links Pros Seek 4 Ryder Team Berths

P. G. A. Head Names Field Eligible to Compete for U. S. Squad.

By the United Press.

New York, April 16.—For 13 of our better professional golfers—and any second-raters who may come through with a title—the P. G. A. and U. S. Open tournaments in May and June will offer final opportunities to clinch one of four remaining places on the American Ryder Cup squad.

This "baker's dozen" of fairway fusileers was named today by P. G. A. President George Jacobus to compete for positions on the team which meets England in the sixth of these biennial series June 29-30, at Southport, England.

Six men already have been named to the team. The four from the group of 13 who return lowest averages for two rounds of qualifying play in the P. G. A. May 25 to 30 at Pittsburgh, and for four rounds of the U. S. Open, June 10 and 12 at Birmingham, Mich., will round out the team.

The "outsiders" have a chance, for if any accredited P. G. A. member not among the 13 candidates or 6 already on the team wins either tournament he automatically makes the team.

Old Line Handicap Golfers Play Today

Maryland State golfers handicap week will start today at all member clubs and continue through April 26. An 18-hole medal play tournament will run simultaneously at all clubs. A State association card must be purchased before entering.

Respective winners in classes A, B and C, low gross and low net, from each club, will play at either Indian Spring or Hillendale, at Towsom, Md., on May 5, to determine the winners.

D. C. Gun Club to Stage Regular Weekly Shoot

Over its traps near Benning, the Washington Gun Club will contest today for two events, at added-target and distance handicap, respectively. For each event a trophy is provided, the gross score to win in the first event, at 50 targets.

Wednesday, April 28, the club will stage a "courtesy shoot," with three trophies to be competed for by non-member friends of the club, and three to be competed for by club members. All these trophies will be alloted on Lewis class system, one to the high gun in each of three classes.

DiMaggio's Tonsils Are Now No More

New York, April 16 (AP).—Joe DiMaggio, star sophomore outfielder of the New York Yankees, today underwent an operation for the removal of his tonsils and adenoids.

Originally, only the tonsils were to come out, but attending physicians decided to take out the star's adenoids while they were at it.

After a snip-by-snip description of the most widely publicized tonsil-lectorny of the season, Dr. Girard Oberrender announced that Joe will live to haunt the American League pitchers. He is expected to be in the Yankee line-up in about two weeks.

Columbian Leagues Adopt New Age Rules

Washington's largest juvenile sandlot league, the Columbian peewee, insect and midget divisions, have ruled that no peewee shall have reached his sixteenth birthday before September 1; no insect shall have reached his seventeenth birthday before the same date, and no midget his eighteenth birthday.

Umpires will be paid directly by the league instead of by team managers. Applicants, who must wear a uniform in action, must register at 610 Irving street northwest. The league is trying to secure high school diamonds for its games. Midgets will play Sunday ball and insects and peewees weekdays. All-Star games will again be held in Griffith Stadium.

On the Air Today

Rex Chandler and his "Universal Rhythm" show, heard for several months over an NBC network Friday nights, begins a new series tonight at WJSV, at 7:30. Richard Bonelli becomes the star of the show, replacing Olga Albani. The Landt Trio continues, and in addition Alec Templeton, the highly entertaining blind English pianist, who first came to these shores with Jack Hylton and his orchestra, will be a regular member of the cast.

Bonelli will specialize in light classics despite the fact that he recently was voted "favorite of the opera" by the Women's Musical Club of New York. In truth, he will sing many a current popular tune.

Templeton is appearing in the Rainbow Room in Rockefeller Center and has been hailed as tops in entertainment in this highly competitive spot, "top o' the town." His current stunt is to request his audience to give him the titles of four or five songs, from which he weaves a symphonic arrangement of all. The requests usually are as far apart as "St. Louis Blues" and the "Second Hungarian Rhapsody." One of these improvisations is promised for the opening air show tonight.

For the premiere of the new series the orchestra plays "Great Day," "Pop Goes the Weazel," "Carioca" and "Swing High, Swing Low," Bonelli offers "Song of the Open Road," "Irish Names" and a medley of "Stout Hearted Men," "Buying Gowns" and "When I Grow Too Old to Dream," with the orchestra.

The Landt Trio highlights "The Man Who Likes to Shave."

A number of stations over the country are getting a kick out of presenting a "boners' court" or some such program in which announcers are brought to the green carpet and chided for their errors on the air. Out in Denver, where KLZ conducts such a show, one lady wrote in and cited three errors by one announcer and attached a card bearing three dimes. The announcer would be fined 30 cents, 10 cents an error, because of the lady's letter—so she sent the money along and added "pity the poor announcers, anyway." WOL has been having considerable fun with the idea, although I can't help but feel that a lot of theater tickets must be awarded weekly. (You get theater tickets if you report errors, you see, in announcing.) J. H. H.

Labor Strength Seen as No Bar To Trade Rise

Better Relations Possible if Labor and Congress Co-operate.

New York, April 16.—In its weekly summary of the general business situation, the Standard Statistics Co. says today:

"With labor now given unprecedented powers by the Supreme Court decisions on the national labor relations act, the responsibilities of the union leaders have been increased tremendously, and the basis for harmonious employer-employe relationships rest chiefly on the ability of these leaders to take on the added responsibilities. It is highly probable that public opinion would react unfavorably if labor presses its position to make unreasonable demands on business.

"It is generally recognized that the labor act to too one-sided in that too much emphasis is placed on the responsibilities of the employers and too little on the employes. Now that the act has been upheld, the way has been opened for much needed revisions, particularly in the direction of strengthening the powers of the Labor Board, so that business would have some recourse in future disputes.

"The new interpretations placed by the Court on interstate and intrastate commerce obviously give much greater powers to the Federal Government. It is expected that legislation will be proposed at the present session of Congress incorporating some of the features of the NIRA, particularly as regards competitive practices, child labor and minimum wages in the large industries such as steel, textile and automobiles, which apparently are subject to some control under the new conception of interstate commerce.

"From a broad business standpoint, there appears to be no reason why the decision should check the cyclical recovery now under way. In fact, if both labor and Congress make sensible use of their newfound powers, it is conceivable that the basis will later to established for more amiable employer-employe relations for some time to come. Because of the present high rate of industrial activity, any necessary adjustments should be accomplished with little difficulty."

Billion Spent By Railroads In Past Year

Rolling Stock, Roadway Expense $298,991,000, Most Since 1931.

Class I railroads of the United States in 1936 expended in excess of $1,000,000,000 for capital improvements to rolling stock, roadway and structures, and for fuel, materials and supplies used in connection with operation, according to a review of railway operations made public yesterday by the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads. This review is based on complete reports for the year 1936 received from the individual roads by the Bureau of Railway Economics.

Capital expenditures in 1936 for locomotives, freight and passenger cars, and also roadway and structures totaled $298,991,000, an increase of $110,689,000 above such expenditures in 1935, and the greatest amount for any year since 1931. For equipment alone, gross capital expenditures in 1936 amounted to $156,104,000 compared with $79,335,000 in 1935. Capital expenditures for roadway and structures made by the Class I railroads in the past calendar year totaled $139,887,000 compared with $108,967,000 in 1935. The carry-over into 1937 of unexpended authorization for capital expenditures amounted to $187,693,000.

Purchases of fuel, materials and supplies of all kinds totaled $803,421,000 in 1936, an increase of $210,396,000 compared with 1935, and the greatest amount expended for such purposes in any year since 1930.

The Class I railroads in 1936 expended $1,238,000,000 for maintenance of equipment and right-of-way. This was an increase of $162,000,000 above such expenditures made in 1935. For maintenance of equipment, a total of $783,000,000 was spent in the past calendar year compared with $682,000,000 in 1935, and for maintenance of way, the expenditures in 1936 of the Class I railroad amounted to $455,000,000 compared with $394,000,000 in the preceding year.

The average number of employees on the pay rolls of the Class I railroads in 1936 was 1,065,970, an increase of 71,600 compared with that for 1935, and the payroll was increased by $205,000,000.

Auto Production Gains in Week

Detroit, April 16 (AP).—Cram's Reports, Inc., estimated today that this week's output of the motor car plants would total 124,970 cars and trucks, compared with its revised estimate of 99,196 units last week. For the comparable week a year ago Cram's listed production at 119,834.

It placed last week's Chrysler assemblies, the first since the recent strike, at 22,200 cars and trucks. General Motors was estimated at 52,155 against 51,525, and Ford unchanged at 34,850.

The Market

By Carlton A. Shively, A Special Correspondent.

Stocks Decline Moderately in More Active Trading as Grain Breaks; Sterling Up.

New York, April 16.—Most of the excitement in financial markets took place in wheat. Futures on the Winnipeg exchange broke the price limit for the day. July wheat in Chicago closed 4¼ cents lower at 117¾ cents a bushel. The crack in grains, softness of cotton and the lowering of certain commodity prices, as that for copper, seemed to have their genesis abroad, and naturally speculators on this side were inclined to think that fears over there of currency revaluation were still entertained.

Those fears doubtless are being kept alive by the continued heavy shipments of Russian gold to the London market. Government bonds also were somewhat easier in tone, and stocks worked irregularly lower on a turnover which rose to above a million shares.

A contributing cause to the uneasiness possibly was the heavy addition made this week to this country's monetary gold stock and the sharp rise in sterling, which set a new high price for the year. The cause of sterling's strength was the demand for the currency arising from the purchase of gold offered in the London market.

Closing deals confirmed the promise of a dull session given with opening sales, which brought mildly lower prices to a majority of stocks and uncovered a condition of indecision on the part of traders. For the most part those who have held stocks a long while still are unwilling to sell, partly because of the heavy income profits taxes involved and partly because of the conviction that eventually higher prices will be seen. Late comers—and a great many managed to get in near the peak prices reached a few weeks ago—are now between the usual fires of whether to buy more and "average up," to take their losses and wait for still lower prices before re-entering, or merely to hang on and hope for better days.

Steel shares, aside from National Steel, were a bit soggy, and so were the coppers when a leading producer brought its selling price down to the 15½-cent level, a quotation set several days ago by another larger seller. Railroad shares were by no means buoyant, but some interest was shown here and there. New York Central found favor and rose a point or so. American Smelting was an exception in the metal group, hardening on the plan to sell some Revere Brass holdings.

The week-end financial statistics give no cause for alarm lest the country turn from its course toward inflation. A record amount of gold for recent weeks was added to the monetary gold stock. The total of $105,000,000 included about $20,000,000 of metal sold by the Stabilization Fund to the Treasury, which was gold acquired by the fund in its exchange operations—that is, its purchase of francs or sterling, or both, in an effort to keep the dollar from rising. If the dollar should be allowed to find its own level, which would be considably higher against sterling and francs, that automatically would tend to diminish the flow of gold to this country.

In addition to the gold influx (which did not affect credit because of its sterilization), the operations of the Treasury and the Federal Reserve Banks in purchase of Government securities, to support prices and to cheapen the money market, brought a jump of $190,000,000 in excess bank reserves, with only two weeks to go before the remainder of the higher reserve requirements—designed to reduce excess reserves—will go into effect. Thus the authorities are effectively undoing with the left hand the work of the right hand.

Total Federal Reserve bank credit in use this week climbed $35,000,000—or nearly as much as the increase for the past year, and the banks added $28,000,000 of Government securities to their investment. Those operations, together with the beginning of fresh borrowings by the Treasury, at $50,000,000 a week, and the uneasiness at Washington over the patent fact that the underestimate of tax receipts and the expansion of expenditures are going to bring a real crisis in the budget, are by no means reassuring on the side of stability from a long range viewpoint.

Revere Copper Sale.

News that American Smelting intends to sell to the public A stock in Revere Copper brought sharp delines in the A and the common shares. Actually, it seems, Revere stock was offered in various quarters by Smelters, but there was a failure of buyer and seller to come together. Those copper companies which have not gone in heavily for fabricating facilities apparently do not care for that side of the business, and the others are well supplied. Revere, as its latest earnings statement shows, is now a good money maker and consequently it should find a good market for its shares. Current setback in copper prices does not seem to have affected the market for the finished product, which, incidentally, has been remarkably impervious to weakness in copper metal prices for many years.

Bank Insurance.

The interesting thing about the announcement of the first expulsion of a bank from the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation was the statement of the president of the New Jersey institution that it would continue to do business as before without FDIC membership. The depositors have nothing to worry about, for their money is insured for two years after the expulsion order is effective, in this case May 1, although the funds they deposit after May 1 will not be insured. The incident also is interesting in that it suggests that the FDIC would desert banks rather than continue to insure deposits which it believes are too great a risk. Still another feature of the expulsion which did not go unnoticed by banks was the admission of the FDIC that it had issued 50 warnings which, if not heeded, will mean 50 more expulsions in the course of time. Probably the deposit insurance corporation has been irked by having to pay for the series of bank failures which have occurred since deposit insurance went into effect.

Gold by the Ton.

About $10,000,000 in gold was reported purchased in London for American account after the official price had been fixed on a smaller lot and cables from London told of the arrival there of $50,000,000 more of Russian gold. Demand for sterling to pay for these large gold acquisitions boosted the pound to a new high record around $4.92. The rise was opposed at times by the British authorities and there was more gossip of a possible lowering of the sterling peg level by agreement with, if not actually at, the request of the United States. If gold is to pile up here for several weeks at anything like the present rate, the Treasury will have a serious problem if it continues to operate the sterilization machinery.

Boston Wool Market.

Boston, April 16 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agri.).—Trade in wool on the Boston market was light today. Limited quantities of original bag fine territory wools sold at firm prices.

Quotations were strong on Australian wools. Receipts of such wools at Boston have been much smaller during April than in March and offerings here were steadily reduced by mill demands.

There was a scattered demand for a few grades of South American wools at about steady to firmer prices.

Curb Is Lower In Light Trading

New York, April 16 (AP).—Depressed by a comparatively small amount of selling, the curb market closed generally lower today. Gulf Oil and a few inactive specialties moved counter to the trend and finished with substantial gains, but elsewhere minus signs were the rule with losses ranging from fractions to around 2. The market was affected by a late downswing in the big board, which was responsive to a further sharp decline in leading commodities.

Aluminum Co. of America closed at 158, off 2; Humble Oil, 81¼, off 1¼; Montgomery Ward "A" 141, off 1; Pittsburgh Plate Class, 133¼, off 1½; Sherwin Williams, 135, off 2; Tubize Chatillon, 30, off 1⅞. World Wheat Prices Collapse In Selling Rush importers' demand for wheat, while others blamed uncertainty as to Canada's policy for marketing her grain reserves.

Then, too, there was talk improved conditions in the United States winter wheat belt were having more effect. Some observers cited the general decline in commodity markets and said there apparently had been a revision in trade circles as to world wheat demand. Gold rumors also were mentioned while cables reported Southern Hemisphere wheat was pressed for sale abroad.

Speculators Caught.

One prominent trade authority here said European wheat speculators appeared to have been caught in a much overbought market position, especially at Paris. They were reported as having become apprehensive over gold rumors, and had made semi-panicky efforts this morning to extricate themselves by selling right and left. This was done despite the circumstance that temporarily the wheat markets were relatively bare of buying orders, largely owing to consumer resistance because of recent rapid advances in price.

came especially beyond control at

The selling rush thus started be- Liverpool and Rotterdam. Liverpool cables reported the selling there was virtually regardless of price. As a result chiefly of word that Liverpool quotations were down 7⅛ cents a bushel overnight, wheat in Chicago fell abruptly the furthest limit immediately possible.

Contributing to the downward plunge were reports of urgent offerings of Southern Hemisphere wheat overseas, increased estimates of the Australian crop, as well as a large crop being harvested by India, and heavy shipments from Argentina leading to belief the Argentine crop had been underestimated.

Marilyn Miller Fund Arouses Court Battle

New York, April 16 (AP).—The $63,000 trust fund that pretty Marilyn Miller earned with her dancing in the movies before Broadway's footlights was the object of a court battle today, just a year and a week after her death.

A suit filed by Chester Leo O'Brien, former chorus boy, who was the third and last husband of the noted dancer-actress, and who claims 50 per cent of the principal trust fund as a dower right, led to the action. Marilyn's sisters, Mrs. Clare Montgomery and Mrs. Ruth Sweeney, insist O'Brien isn't entitled to a penny. They claim he abandoned the dancer months before she died.

40-Hour Week for Textiles Is Sidestepped at Parley

Prposal Made at Conference Here Is Postponed Until World Labor Meeting in Geneva in June.

French government delegate, came to the aid of his countryman, arguing that the question of a 40-hour week was the most important question to which reference had been made at the conference and that the report on social aspects of the textile industry should reflect, at least, the attitude of the delegates.

In the end the dispute was compromised by adoption of a suggestion made by Paul Schlumberger, French employers' delegate. He offered an amendment to the report which started that "the practicability and necessity for" a reduction in working hours had been urged by all the workers' representatives and certain of the government and employers' representatives, but that, on the other hand, "other employers' and government representatives urged that the reduction of hours was impracticable."

"It will be for the International Labor Conference, which will be convened in Geneva in June next, to come to a decision on this," the Schlumberger amendment added.

This disposed of the most controversial question before the conference, unless agitation for a more definite stand on a shortened workweek is renewed today when the report on social problems comes up at the last plenary session for final approval. It was approved yesterday by the conference sitting in general committee.

Later in the day meeting in plenary session the conference adopted, with only one unimportant amendment, a report of its committee on economic problems. This report suggested the establishment of an international commission "to consider production and prices in the textile industry as a whole" and added that "in this connection it was said that greater balance in the world textile industry involves to a certain degree industrial planning on an international scale."

Geneva Parley in June.

The report also asserted that sentiment within the conference favorable to international action to solve textile problems suggested "the necessity for the continuous consideration of the problems and policies of the industry and the desirability of creating the necessary instruments for that purpose.

More specific action may be taken on those proposals at the Geneva meeting in June. Thus it is possible that an international commission may be set up for guidance of the textile industry analogous to those now in existence for sugar and wheat.

Other suggestions projected by the report on economic problems were:

That "in framing their commercial policies, governments should take account of social conditions prevailing in countries with which they have trade relations, and in particular should bear in mind the standards set by international labor conventions."

That "in the interests of enlarged trade, as well as of improved social conditions, governments should seek every opportunity to reduce unreasonable trade barriers."

That an international tripartite committee might be set up within the I. L. O. "to study measures necessary to achieve prosperity and social justice in the textile industry, or more generally consider all the economic and social problems of the textile industry."

That "minimum wage-fixing machinery and trade boards be established in countries where they do not exist to regulate wages and working conditions."

That "efforts be made to raise purchasing power of consumers in agricultural countries."

In its report on social problems the conference held that voluntary organizations of employers and workers for collective bargaining should be encouraged but held that collective agreements do not always afford adequate safeguards for the effective regulation of working conditions and that the desired end may be more surely attained by legislation in the national sphere and the adoption, ratification and effective application of international conventions.

Night Shifts Opposed.

The report also held that night shifts "should be resorted to only when required as a matter of strict necessity" and that special regulations should be considered regarding the working hours of young persons working in two shifts.

"Night work by women and young persons should be absolutely prohibited," was another suggestion.

Governments which have not done so were urged to ratify previous I. L. O. conventions relating to weekly rest and annual holidays with pay. The report also suggested that "a minimum age should be fixed by law in all countries for the admission of young persons to employment in the industry" and that I. L. O. "should renew its efforts to bring about a solution of the problem of the regulation of labor conditions in the International Settlements in China."

The concluding session of the conference will be held this morning at 10 o'clock, with John G. Winant, former chairman of the Social Security Board, presiding. The delegates and their advisory staffs will be the guests at luncheon of the Council on International Relations of Washington at Weley Hall, 1703 K street.

Speakers will be Charles Brown, Government delegate from Canada; Senor Ampudia del Valle, Mexican government; Carter Goodrich, United States Government delegate, and Charles Hedges, Cuban employers' delegate. Leifur Magnusson, Washington representative of the I. L. O., will preside.

Many of the delegates will remain in the United States for another week or more. Plans have been made for a visit to a knitting and wool mill in Philadelphia on Monday and to a cotton mill at Boston on Wednesday. Arrangements also are being made for factory visits in New York during next week, Winant announced.

It is bound on its crucial mission which will tell just how well officers and men have learned their lessons.

The mighty force left San Pedro and San Diego bases early this morning.

Woman to Face Trial on Forcing Couple to Marry

By the Associated Press.

Williamsport, Pa., April 16.—Mrs. Elizabeth Kinney was held for court today on a charge of forcing a 15-year-old girl to marry Frank Kiper, jr., 17, of Williamsport, at Hagerstown, Md., a month ago.

Policewoman Annabelle Smead, who filed the conspiracy charge, accused the woman of forcing the marriage in the hope that moral charges against her son, Merrill, would be dropped.

Alderman S. S. Kendrick, jr., who held the hearing, committed Mrs. Kinney to the county jail in default of bail. The son also is in the same jail awaiting trial.

Vanished Groom's Body Discovered

Elko, Nev., April 16 (AP).—The body of a man identified as James David Smith, of Shippensburg, Pa., who disappeared three weeks ago en route to his wedding, was found today in isolated northeastern Nevada under circumstances indicating suicide.

The victim was identified as Smith by Sheriff Charles A. Harper and District Attorney Douglas A. Castle, who said the man was found slumped in his automobile 23 miles east of Wells.

Castle said Smith "undoubtedly committed suicide." Wells is about 61 miles west of the Utah State line in a sparsely settled area of the Nevada Desert.

The man last was seen Good Friday when he left Shippensburg, more than 2,500 miles from where his body was found, for nearby Chambersburg to marry Kathleen Bard.

Justices Under 70 Rule Out Securtiy

Both of the circuit court judges who ruled yesterday that the social security act is unconstitutional are under 70 years of age, while the one judge who dissented is beyond the three-score-and-ten mark.

While the majority finding, to be appealed to the Supreme Court, directed attention again to President Roosevelt's court reorganization plan, based on establishment of 70 as retirement age, a study of records of the jurists hearing the case at Boston revealed these facts:

Judge Scott Wilson and Judge James M. Morton, jr., are both 67 years of age. They held the act unconstitutional. Both were appointed to the circuit bench by President Hoover, Wilson in October, 1929, and Morton in December, 1931.

Judge Bingham, who dissented, is 72 years old, and was appointed by President Wilson in June, 1913.

Officer Faces 50 Accusations OfTicketFixing

lateral and adjustment office will be transferred to the various precincts.

At present, policemen assigned to this bureau handle ticket adjustments, the posting of collateral and complaints on traffic violation notices. To their discretion is left the matter of canceling tickets or issuing warnings.

These functions, under Maj. Brown's order, will be taken over by commanding officers of the several precincts. Collateral for traffic offense, beginning Monday, may be posted at any of the 12 precinct stations.

Sergt. John J. Agnew, present chief of the central collateral bureau, will become an assistant to Inspector Edwards. Lieut. Walter Beale, now the inspector's assistant, will be transferred to precinct duty.

Maj. Brown's order also permits precinct commanders to increase the amount of collateral established by the traffic act when circumstances in a traffic violation case justifies such action.

Blow to Careless Drivers.

This was taken as a direct blow at negligent drivers who contribute to highway hazards and accidents.

The traffic records office will remain at police headquarters in charge of Capt. Milton D. Smith, traffic division commander.

In future cases of ticket cancellations or warnings by precinct commanders, weekly reports on "each and every traffic violation notice" thus disposed of must be forwarded to Maj. Brown, the order read.

In addition to this, precinct commanders will be required to keep records of each warning or cancellation and the reason.

And under the new order, commanding officers will conduct monthly examinations of "ticket" books used by each policeman to see they are in proper order and each case is being followed up properly.

Tickets in Triplicate.

Every policeman, Maj. Brown ordered, will be required each day to submit duplicates of all "tickets" issued. A third copy will remain in his "ticket" book until the book is completed, and then all copies must be turned in to the commanding officer for final inspection."

In line with current efforts to promote highway safety and reduce accidents, Maj. Brown's order also included the following paragraph:

"All members of the Metropolitan Police Department, irrespective of their assignments, shall enforce all traffic laws and regulations and take proper action in all cases coming to their attention."

Stressing courtesy in dealings with the motoring public, Maj. Brown ordered:

"Police officers are hereby instructed to be extremely courteous and polite in their contacts with the public and should in no way indulge in so-called wisecracks or sarcastic remarks that will tend to cause a feeling of resentment on the part of the person approached. Their conduct should always be above reproach or criticism."

Hero of Gun Battle Receives Promotion in Bed

Detective John A. Caton, injured seriously when he shot it out with three bandit suspects, yesterday was given the oath of office as detective sergeant as he lay on his cot in Walter Reed Hospital. The elevation was a reward for his courage. Left to right are Chief Property Clerk Howard Crawford, Caton, Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen.

Caton, Wounded Hero in Gun-Battle Capture Of Bandit Suspects, Made Detective Sergeant

The promotion of John A. Caton, hero of a recent holdup in which he was wounded seriously in a pistol battle with three youthful bandit suspects, from precinct detective to detective sergeant, was announced yesterday by Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police.

The announcement was coupled with three other shifts.

Caton was sworn in yesterday afternoon at Walter Reed Hospital, where he is recovering from three bullet wounds incurred last week in the ice-cream store holdup which his courageous action frustrated, by Maj. Brown and Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen. Caton wounded two of the suspects. All three were captured.

Detective Sergeant A. D. Mansfield was demoted to a uniformed patrolman at the same time. Mansfield, a headquarters officer assigned to duty in the Tenth Precinct, will take over his new job at the Fourth Precinct.

Reasons given for Mansfield's demotion were that he had conducted proper investigations in "few, if any," of his assignments and had shown "an entire disregard of his responsibilities and duties as a detective sergeant."

To fill a vacancy created by Caton's promotion, the promotion of James Ennis, Twelfth Precinct patrolman, was announced. He will become a precinct detective and will remain on duty in the same precinct.

As Caton was assigned to the Tenth Precinct, the transfer of Irving Rosenberg, detective at the Twelfth Precinct, to the Tenth Precinct, was announced.

Meanwhile, William H. McGrath, formerly attached to the Police Court branch of the corporation counsel's office, yesterday resigned from the department.

Stating that he was quitting in order to practice law, McGrath, who recently was the subject of charges considered by the trial board and later dropped, announced that he would enter the law firm of Robert W. McCullough.

He had been charged with performing legal services for compensation in violation of police regulations.

His letter of resignation, which was a formal one submitted to the commissioners through Maj. Ernest W. Brown, said: "In view of the many commendations and complimentary remarks of my immediate superiors for past services, I assumed those duties to you (the Commissioners) and more especially the public have been properly and efficiently performed."

Charges brought against McGrath had to be dropped last week when the complaining witness failed to prosecute. He was to have faced the trial board on charges of making untruthful statements before a court, conduct prejudical to the good order and accepting employment which interfered with the proper performance of police duties, in addition to the charge of performing legal services for compensation.

McGrath recently had been assigned to duty as a radio-squad car patrolman at the Ninth Precinct. His resignation will become effective on or about May 18.

to this port after it started to run the insurgent blockade.

Planes Rout Rebels.

Madrid, April 16 (AP).—Insurgents clinging desperately to University City were tightly bottled up tonight in the government's siege within a siege.

Gen. Jose Miaja, government commander, said the isolated garrison of 3,000 was "noqueado" (knocked out).

With this troublesome insurgent unit cut off from communication with their comrades in the northwest Madrid sector, the government strengthened its lines against insurgents who have tried vainly to shatter the last line capital defenses.

Terror Reign Ended.

Madrid, April 16 (U.P.).—Loyalist militiamen tonight scaled the granite walls of Mount Cabezo in southern Spain and broke up an eight-months' reign of terror by two crazed rebel officers over 1,000 starving men, women and children.

The government troops drove the tortured rebel band from an ancient convent—the Virgin of the Cabeza—atop the peak. The rebels, with their wives and children, fled down the opposite side of the mountain toward Badajoz.

A story of spreading sickness and brutality atop the mountain, less than 80 miles from the Portuguese frontier, was told by three deserters.

They said that men, women and children were driven to desperation by hunger and pleaded with the rebel officers, a Capt. Cortes and a Lieut. Ruano, to surrender.

Agree on Blockade.

By the Associated Press.

London, April 16.—Final details were arranged today for the international naval blockade of Spain upon which hang Europe's hopes of isolating the civil war.

When the vessels of Great Britain, France, Italy and Germany start their patrol at midnight, Monday, April 19, they will seek to prevent further foreign arms and men entering Spain.

$3,000,000 Is Paid By Doheny Estate In U. S. Settlement

By the Associated Press.

Attorney General Cummings said yesterday executors of the estate of the late Edward L. Doheny, oil magnate, had paid the Government $3,000,000 in final settlement of a $6,130,531 judgment won by the Government in 1933.

The payment, Cummings said, ended 14 years of litigation that followed the alleged fraudulent leasing of Government oil lands to the Pan-American Petroleum Co. by Albert B. Fall, while Secretary of the Interior.

Alfred Swayne, G. M. Officer, Dies

New York, April 16 (AP).—Alfred Harris Swayne, 67, vice president and director of the General Motors Corporation and chairman of the board of the General Motors Acceptance Corporation, died tonight. He had been connected with General Motors since 1919, when he became vice president in charge of financial policies of the Acceptance Corporation. Previously he had practiced law and engaged in the brokerage and banking business.

A native of Washington, D. C., Mr. Swayne spent most of his life in New York City. He was educated at St. Paul's School, in Concord, N. H.; Yale and the New York Law School.

He is survived by two sistres, Miss Eleanor Swayne, of New York, and Mrs. Virginia Lomas, of Brussels, and two brothers, Wager Swayne, of New York, and Noah Swayne, a member of the Connecticut Legislature.

$25,000 Holdup Thwarted by Secretary

Bridgeport, Conn., April 16 (AP).—The alertness of a woman employe frustrated the attempt of three masked robbers to steal the $25,000 pay roll at the Raybestos-Manhattan Co. plant today. Police said the men were captured within an hour and a half and identified themselves as William C. Olah, 40; William Sherwood, 30, and Bronislav Szeliga, 30, all of this city.

Mrs. Susan Porter, secretary to an official of the company, was credited with having saved the money by slamming the door of her private office and hiding it in a desk drawer which the men failed to search.

100,000 Workers Strike in Poland

By the Associated Press.

Michaelokowice, Poland, April 16. A wave of strikes swept Poland with increasing intensity tonight as new walkouts were called almost as soon as one was settled.

Sixteen hundred hunger-striking mine workers, barricaded deep in a shaft, won demands for higher pay, while a "sit down" strike was started in the Andalusia Mine at nearby Brzeziny.

An estimated 100,000 were on strike in various industries throughout Poland.

IN HOC SIGNO VINCES
PALL MALL
THE MODERN BLEND
A modern American cigarette by the famous Pall Mall

"Made without any artificial flavouring, medication or "sugar-coating," the new Pall Mall bids for the favour of the modern American smoker with the straight tobacco flavour of finer and more expensive tobaccos alone.

In this, it follows faithfully the thorough English blending tradition of the Turkish Pall Mall, famous as "A Shilling in London, A Quarter Here." The flavour of the Modern Blend of Pall Mall is produced by an unhurried blending of the finest domestic tobaccos with the most fragrant varieties of Oriental leaf . . . and nothing else.

Thus you may judge for yourself the quality of Pall Mall's unflavoured tobaccos. They will bring you relief from the after-taste of sweetened or artificially flavoured cigarettes.

Its special English wrapping provides a tab on the back of the packet with which to open the corner, leaving the rest of the cellulose for continued protection.
